Greeks Holding Off All Italian Attacks

Splendid Resistance in Face of Invaders' Onslaught

Salonika, Oct. 31.

THE Greek lines on the Macedonian sector of the Albanian front remain unbroken, though some of the advance posts have been withdrawn, according to the latest reports received here writes Reuter's special correspondent covering the Italian-Greek war. Italian Alpine chasseurs are in this sector but, apart from desultory shelling of Greek line, apparently in an attempt to locate their exact position, the Italians have not made any major move. The Greek command in the front line has ordered that positions should be maintained at all costs in the face of any attack, but that no attempt should be made to follow up any local successes.

"It learnt that in one sector Italian troops fell into a well-concealed trap of machine-gun nests and were mowed down. The local commander took advantage of the Italian rout which followed, and pursued the Italians with deadly success into Albanian territory. He paid for his Nelson touch with temporary suspension from his command.

"About 50 Italian prisoners have already arrived in Salonika. Meanwhile, great confidence prevails here and in northern Greece generally. Military and business circles express the opinion that Mussolini did not expect to have his bluff called and jumped too soon Other wise, say the Greeks, he would have been ready to launch an immediate offensive with which he threatened General Metaxas, Premier and Commander-in-Chief of the Greek Forces, on Sunday.

"An officer who had recently returned from the Albanian frontier, laughed at the stories of alleged incidents and related how, before the outbreak of war, the opposing troops had fraternized and exchanged gifts.

"Hitherto, there has been no Italian attack on Salonika, which has been blacked-out for the past three nights, with anti-aircraft batteries in a state of readiness. Instead of a bright waterfront, cafes have shuttered their windows and have dim blue lights. Scattered groups on the esplanade, examining the brilliant starlit sky, wondered whether Italian bombers would attempt a demoralizing attack such as that made on Patras.

"Air-raid shelters were being hastily dug in the main square of the city. In the harbour lie 50 gaily painted coasting vessels immobilized since the outbreak of the war, and in warehouses, nearby, is last year's tobacco crop ready for shipment to America and worth hundreds of thousands of pounds sterling.

"Italian residents here, numbering about 500, have been arrested but the Germans are still at large. Everything on wheels has been requisitioned. even down to bicycles, and only trams are running. The mobilization is proceeding rapidly and smoothly. Great enthusiasm prevails and Greek troops are cheered on their way to the Albanian frontier.

"The troops are encouraged by the strong Greek resistance being shown on the frontier, and vow they will soon push the Italians back to the Adriatic. A number of hardy mountaineers were played off at the station here with pastoral bagpipes." —Reuter.

Advance Slowed

London, Oct. 31.

An admission that the Italian advance against Greece had been slowed down was contained in a High Command communique broadcast from Rome. It was stated that Italian units in Epirus had reached the River Kiljas at various points. The communique then added: "Unfavourable weather conditions and obstacles created by the enemy in retreat have now slowed down the movements of our troops.

"The Italian air force overcoming adverse weather conditions and lively enemy anti-aircraft reaction, bombed Parus and several enemy ships laden with troops. Barracks at Metzovo Pass and important fortifications in the valley of Kalaas River were also bombed. One Greek machine was shot down by our fighters. One Italian machine has not returned." —Reuter.

Italians Claim 20 Miles Advance

Britain Urged to Seize Greek Islands; Greeks Speculate on Help

London, Oct. 31.

Italian forces have penetrated Greek territory 20 miles at some places and the advance is proceeding, states an Italian High Command communique.

The Italian Air Force is said to have repeatedly bombed military objectives, including docks at Patras, railway lines, port installations and the airport at Athens.

The Rome radio denies that any action has taken place between British and Italian warships.

A Greek communique says Italian forces of varying strength all day yesterday attacked defence positions in successive waves but the positions were held.

A Rome message to the American press says Germany and Italy are likely to negotiate with Russia with the object of keeping her uot of the Balkans.

Mr. G. Ward Price, prominent writer, in an article in the "Daily Mail," urges Britain to seize the principal Greek islands and make them key points in the Aegean. "Is not this the time for General Wavell to attack?" he asks. "The western desert is the best place to fight the battle for Greece."—Reuter.

U.S. May Settle Trouble At Martinique

Destroyers, Bombers Leave Under Sealed Orders

Washington, Oct. 31.

The mysterious departure under sealed orders of five United States destroyers, 17 bombers and one seaplane from Key West, Florida has led to much speculation which was heightened when Col. Frank Knox, Navy Secretary, smilingly refused to divulge their destination.

Rumours have suggested that the ships are bound for French Martinique where disagreement between Vichy partisans and the faction opposed to the Petain Government is reported to be nearing a climax.

While the five destroyers are inadequate to seize the island if the French offer resistance it is known that other American units including new cruisers are in the region.—Reuter.

Italy a "So-Called Great Power"

Greek Minister Denounces Italian Attack

London, Oct. 31.

The Greek Minister, M. Simopoulos, speaking yesterday at a luncheon here, referred to Italy as a "so-called Great Power" and called the Italian invasion of Greece "a dastardly attack."

"The Italian Government," M. Simopoulos declared, "is conscious of the villainy of its action and has sought to find an excuse by accusing Greece of fomenting troubles in Albania and violating its neutrality.

"The whole world knows these allegations are untrue," he concluded.

The company at the luncheon drank a toast to "Greece immortal." —United Press.

Italians Deny King Zog Leading Revolt in Albania

Rome Reports No Further Disturbances in Conquered Territory; Italian Successes Claimed

Rome, Oct. 31.

Informed sources here yesterday categorically denied a report that Zog, former King of Albania, was leading a revolt in the land from which he fled when Italy occupied it. The reports were described as fantastic and absurd.

Informed sources also said that there have been further disturbances in Albania, since revolt flared up several days ago.

Greek forces have not occupied a single inch of Albanian territory, authoritative quarters also said. They likewise denied a report, attributed to the Rome radio that Italian forces had penetrated 40 miles across the Vojuss river and had captured the town of Sheen Nikol.

Italian troops have occupied large areas within Cimuira, a district in Albania under Greek domination, according to reports from Tirana carried in the "Giornale d'Italia."

Albanian troops were among the vanguard of Italian forces which occupied the areas, the reports said.

"The Albanian population, formerly under Greece, including the inhabitants of Cimuria, welcomed the liberating troops with the Fascist salute and waved Italian and Albanian flags," the newspaper said.—United Press.

British Mines Block Gulf Of Corinth

Isthmus, Corinth Canal Vital to Greece; Details Of British Air Attacks

London, Oct. 31.

The Admiralty announced yesterday that mine fields laid by the British Navy had blocked effectively both entrances to the Gulf of Corinth in the Ægean Sea. Thus, the authorities explained, a protective barrier was thrown about the Isthmus of Corinth, the only land bridge between Peloponese and northern Greece.

The Isthmus and also the Corinth canal are both vital to Greece, hence Italy might well have tried in that vicinity either a surprise landing or a bombardment from the sea, the Admiralty statement explained.

Corfu, it was stated, is not included in the area now protected by mines but it was explained that Corfu's strategic importance is small except that it is useful as a naval anchorage.

Direct Hits

Details of the British air attack in the Dodecanese area were received here last night in news despatches, which said the Italian aerodrome at Maritza was attacked three times. The transport depot, hangars, a dozen planes on the ground and the offices of the aerodrome were destroyed, these despatches said.

The Italian aerodrome at Carpathos was said to have been bombarded twice, and this attack forced the troops ordinarily stationed there to pass the night in a neighbouring village. Ammunition dumps, petrol stores, wireless equipment and barracks were claimed by the British to have been destroyed by Carpathos. A large number of Italian troops was said to have been killed by the bombs.

Petrol Dumps Blown Up

The despatches said petrol dumps were blown up during the aerial bombardment of the Lepida aerodrome.

Naval authorities in a statement last night revealed that Italian naval units had attempted unsuccessfully to destroy shipping in the harbour at Gibraltar.

"An abortive attempt was made by Italian naval officers this morning," the statement said, "to torpedo ships in the harbour at Gibraltar, using a special device. One torpedo exploded harmlessly at the harbour entrance and another ran ashore in Spanish territory."—United Press.

French Suffer Under Nazi Domination

Food, Wines, Trucks All Removed to Germany

London, Oct. 31.

How France has suffered under German occupation is revealed in a statement by the Ministry of Economic Warfare which says that at least 800,000 tons of wheat were removed to Germany from occupied France. Bread is now rationed in France at 87 ounces a week. A large number of wheat fields were reserved before the harvest for Germans, swastika signs being raised over them.

Meat is rationed at 12½ ounces per week in France but in Germany it is 17½ ounces. More than a million pigs are believed to have been removed from France to Germany during one fortnight in September alone. Thousands of head of cattle also were taken away. The average consumption of butter and oil per head in France before the war has been reduced to between five and six kilos. About 80 per cent. of the French sugar beet crop has been lost owing to fighting in northern France.

French wines have been requisitioned by the Germans and one French firm alone has delivered 12,000,000 bottles of champagne to Germany. Transport has largely broken down in France because trucks and locomotives have been taken to Germany. Lorry transportation is at a standstill owing to shortage of petrol.—Reuter.

Snowstorm Fails to Save Berlin from R.A.F. Attack

Many Centres Suffer Severe Damage in Various Parts of Germany; R.A.F. "Snowmen" in Action

London, Oct. 31.

ATROCIOUS weather over Germany on Tuesday night had the paradoxical effect of increasing the diversity of British attacks, which included Berlin and numerous important military and industrial objectives. Oil supply centres were the chief objectives, but the planes, which encountered excessively bad weather, were deflected elsewhere.

Thus in addition to refineries and storage plants at Magdeburg, Sterkrade and Homberg, oil refineries at Leuna and Gelsenkirchen were bombed. Industrial plants at Leipzig and the Krupp works at Essen received further visitations, while a direct hit was scored on a river bridge at Stralsund, a port on the Baltic.

Other aircraft, unable to locate their primary objectives dropped heavy bombs on railway junctions in the Ruhr district and others further north and east, thus complicating communications between the highly industrialized western regions and the remainder of Germany.

A Great Blaze

Within ten minutes of an attack on a goods yard at Muenster (Westphalia), a great blaze flared up. Fourteen fires broke out on aerodromes, 29 of which were bombed.

Strongly burning fires were started in the refinery areas at Homberg and Sterkrade. At Magdeburg, an explosion from a salvo of bombs was so violent that the attacking aircraft were badly shaken. A few seconds later, a sheet of flame swept across the target.

Docks at Hamburg and Bremen and the naval base at Wilhelmshaven, all three of which had been heavily attacked on the previous night, were visited again. Heavy-calibre bombs, followed by incendiaries, were seen to burst within docks, but a ground haze and low clouds, which prevailed over the greater part of north-west Germany, obscured the damage.

Rail Centres Attacked

Attacks on rail communication centres in Germany were widespread. Goods yards at Cologne, Hamburg and Krefeld and railway junctions at Osnabrueck, Nordhausen and Hildesheim were struck by heavy-calibre bombs. The aircraft which started a fire in a goods yard at Muenster, came under heavy anti-aircraft fire and suffered several hits from shell splinters in the wings and fuselage.

An aerodrome at Rheine, struck by a salvo of heavy-calibre bombs, was lit up by flashes of two terrific explosions which threw debris high into the air.

Docks and shipping at Ijmuiden, Flushing and Den Helder came in for yet another aerial bombardment and at both Flushing and Den Helder fires were started.

The severe conditions in which the raid on Berlin was carried out were described by pilots engaged. The raid was the earliest yet made on Berlin, the first British bombers reaching the capital at 8 p.m. GMT. A snowstorm was raging over the city and made the task of target location extremely difficult, but, after dropping flares, the first raiders succeeded in finding their objectives. Driving snow, however, obscured observation of the results.

The early part of the journey to Berlin was grand, said the pilot of the first aircraft to reach the capital. "Visibility was excellent and we could see the stars in an almost cloudless sky. Then, quite suddenly, we ran into a snowstorm which kept us company all the way to Berlin and most of the way back.

"Snowmen"

Some of the fine powdery snow blew into my cockpit and lay two inches thick on the dashboard recess. To make matters worse, the windscreens of the two front cockpits were completely covered so that we flew many miles almost blind, depending entirely upon our instruments.

"We had hoped to get clear of the snow before reaching Berlin, but if anything it was worse when we arrived. Still we managed to find the target—a large electrical works—and bombed it through the snow."

Another pilot, who visited the outskirts of Berlin, was less fortunate. "We ran into the same fine powdery snow and at one time I looked like a flying snowman. When we first ran into snow I climbed, hoping to find things better higher up, but almost at once the controls began to show signs of freezing up. So we came down and for 35 minutes flew at a couple of thousand feet.

"Once we ran into a terrific anti-aircraft barrage though even that didn't warm us up much."

Chinese Forces Advancing Beyond Nanning

Yu River Crossed, Japanese Engaged in Rearguard Action; Withdrawal from Ichang Reported

Chungking, Oct. 31.

The details of the Chinese occupation of Nanning, capital of Kwangsi province and strategic town on the French Indo-China border, are given in Chinese field despatches from the South Kwangsi front, stating: "Chinese vanguards entered Nanning at 8 p.m. on the night of October 29. The main body of the Chinese forces pushing southward along the highways from Pingyang, and also Wuming, made a formal entry into Nanning at 3 a.m. yesterday.

"After the occupation of Nanning Chinese forces crossed the Yu river and continued their advance southward engaging Japanese forces which were fighting a rearguard action. Chinese forces pushing eastward from Lungchow have already effected a junction with the Chinese forces at Nannig.

"Meanwhile, a Chinese column, operating east of the highway to the south of Nanning, is at present moving south-westward towards Yamchow to which the Japanese forces are at present retreating. Japanese forces at Lungchow have withdrawn to Pingtsiang near the French Indo-China border."

The Chinese military spokesman here this afternoon declared the Nanning and Lungchow areas had been entirely cleared of Japanese forces. He added Japanese forces withdrawing from the Nanning area were boarding transports at Yamchow, while Japanese forces withdrawing from Lungchow were entering French Indo-China and boarding transports at Haiphong.

The total strength of the Japanese forces, evacuating South Kwangsi is estimated at two-and-a-half divisions. The spokesman stated the total of Japanese armed forces in Franch Indo-China as between one and two divisions. There were reports, he said, that Japanese forces from South Kwangsi were being sent to Hainan Island.

Questioned if he thought Japanese forces withdrawn from South Kwangsi were to be used for southward expansion operations, the spokesman replied: "It is yet premature to state the ultimate destination of these forces."—Reuter.

Shanghai Thanked for Contributions

Hearty thanks for contributions made to increasing the Royal Air Force in the Voluntary War Contribution Fund in China were received yesterday from Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Air Production. The cable read:

"Ever generous in their support of the Royal Air Force the British Communities in China bring continuing inspiration to the people of Britain who today sustain the full fury of the Nazi onslaught Stop Their contributions for the purchase of aircraft bring nearer the day when the Luftwaffe will be driven for ever from our skies and when our Air Force will force the evil men who have spread carnage over Europe to beg for the pity they will not deserve Stop Our gratitude for this further gift is deep indeed—Beaverbrook."

The message shows how deeply the effort of China residents is appreciated. It should be an inspiration for redoubling efforts to keep up to the total of £10,000 a month.

London Defences Repel Raiders

Newly-Placed Barrage and R.A.F. Save Capital from German Mass Attacks

London, Oct. 31.

Highly-effective British anti-aircraft batteries yesterday repelled German mass raids on the capital and downed nine enemy raiders, the Air Ministry reported. The British meanwhile lost five planes, but the pilot of one was saved, it was reported.

It was the second successive night that the anti-aircraft barrage, coupled with Royal Air Force planes, kept London safe from mass attack.

A newly-placed barrage belt along the south-east coast, extending 10 miles inland, was said to have surprised and turned back Nazi raiding planes which used the usual "lanes" of approach to London.

The official communique said that "attacks throughout England were not on a heavy scale, although houses were hit in several places. Damage on the whole was slight and casualties were few."

The night raids were confined mainly to London and the southern area of England, the communique said, and a few bombs were dropped in the Midlands. "Most raids were made during the early evening, while night raids ceased some time before daylight," the communique added.

Bombers Driven Back

Many bombers were driven back and some of them jettisoned their bombs in fields, said reports.

Light, sporadic gunfire began the night alarm period and the drone of plane motors was audible in the distance, above the clouds.

For several hours prior to midnight, however, there was a prolonged lull and not even anti-aircraft fire was heard.

Approximately six German planes were reported operating in the London are a earlier in the evening.

Raiders were more active, however, in other parts of England. Oil bombs and high explosive bombs were dropped at frequent intervals in south east England and in a coastal village, it was reported.

Other raiders were reported over a town north-west of Liverpool at 7 p.m.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security announced that seven German raiders were destroyed over Britain during daylight attacks yesterday. Four British planes were reported missing.

"A single enemy aircraft dropped several bombs in north-west England and there were some casualties, including a small number of persons killed," the communique said.—United Press.

Italy Anxious Over French Discussions

"Fruits of Victory" Wanted; Hitler Seen as "Appeaser"; No Formal Agreement with France; Collaboration Begun, Says Petain

London, Oct. 31.

ITALY'S anxiety over the arrangement which Herr Hitler has been trying to make with the Vichy Government is clearly reflected in a Berlin despatch to the official Italian News Agency. The message suggests that the Italians have successfully objected to any Franco-German settlement, which would deprive Italy of the fruits of victory, in exchange for French aid against Britain.

Quoting authoritative German quarters, it says that in Herr Hitler's talks with M. Laval and Marshal Petain "not only was no formal agreement reached but no special problem was even discussed."

The talks, it adds, were solely concerned with a "general plan of the part which France wishes to play in the new European order following the Axis victory."

The despatch concludes: "The new European dispensation cannot fail to take account of the fact that it was France which desired, provoked and lost the war and that for this she must pay in full. On these points there exists no possibility of discussion with the present directors of French policy."—Reuter.

Hitler, "The Appeaser"

Zurich, Oct. 31.

The one inescapable fact emerging from news from both Berlin and Rome is that recent events have compelled Herr Hitler to adopt the unaccustomed role of "appeaser," but whether with better effect than appeasers of last years is still conjectural.

Having, in the first place, abandoned his attempt to persuade Italy to sacrifice her territorial claims against France, Herr Hitler was faced with further Italian recalcitrance in opposing any active or passive assistance of France in the war, which, Signor Massolini feared, might entitle Marshal Petain to equal partnership with Italy in Germany's "new order."

Then came Herr Hitler's hasty visit to Florence, which was followed by significantly soothing German press comment. The "Berliner Boersen-Zeitung," for instance, asserted that, while France had been offered participation in the Axis system if she broke with Britain, Germany promised nothing regarding a later peace. Thereafter the Italian press was noticeably calmer.

The conclusions drawn are: 1. Germany's new offer to France is more generous than the original offer; 2. France is left uncertain whether a temporary peace will be modified later to satisfy Italy; and 3. France's bargaining position depends upon Britain's resistance. Hence, discussion of a detailed execution of the Franco-German agreement may proceed less smoothly than first expected.

More Active Part?

Italy will shortly participate actively in the negotiations with Vichy, according to the belief of political observers here. This is based on the fact that Italy is unwilling to accept a Franco-German agreement that would not fully satisfy Italian claims.

A definite peace between France and the Axis is believed to be much more remote than last week when Germany appeared to be willing to make large concessions to France to secure strategic advantages.

This conclusion is partly due to the emphasis laid in a broadcast on the need for the maintenance of French unity, defence of French soil and honest cooperation "excluding all thoughts of aggression."—Reuter.

No Formal Agreements

Berlin, Oct. 31.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler's conversations last week with M. Pierre Laval, French Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, resulted in no formal agreements, although the fundamental question of France's future were discussed, authorized Nazi quarters said last night.

Three points were mutually recognized, they said, "Firstly, France declared war; secondly, France lost the war; thirdly, France must pay her share of the costs of war."

The motive of the conversations with the French was based on the "responsibility as to the future of Europe," the authorized Nazi spokesman said.

They added that Spain also had "spiritually joined the team for the reorganization of Europe in community with the Axis." — United Press.

Collaboration Begun

Roosevelt Promises 26,000 Planes

Policy of Giving All Aid To Britain to Be Extended; U.S. to Stay Out of War

Washington, Oct. 31.

President Roosevelt in a speech here last night revealed that he was clearing the way for shipment of 26,000 aeroplanes to Great Britain.

"The additional plant facilities which will be required to produce these planes," the President declared, "will make us the strongest air power in the world."

President Roosevelt also disclosed that he had approved a further extension of the policy of giving England all aid short of war, by approving British orders for American artillery, machine-guns, rifles and tanks with all necessary equipment and ammunition.

He again defended the progress of the American rearmament programme and reiterated that American youths will never be sent to fight in a European war.

The President charged the Republican party with having failed failed completely to solve the problems of American agriculture.

The 26,000 aeroplanes he had promised, the President said, would include 14,000 already on order for the Royal Air Force, and an addition 12,000 to which he said he had asked the Defence Priorities Board to "give the most sympathetic consideration."

R.A.F. Stronger

President Roosevelt said that his move to send more planes to Great Britain was promised after the American aircraft manufacturing industry had attained a productive capacity 50,000 aeroplanes annually. He pointed out that productive capacity was an important factor in sustained air power and said that, after three months of blitzkrieg, Britain's Royal Air Force actually was stronger today than at the outbreak of the war. This he attributed chiefly to American replacements.

Supporting his claim that satisfactory progress was being made in the American re-armament programme, President Roosevelt said, "In seven years, we raised the total of ships in commission in the U.S. Navy from 198 to 337, with 119 additional ships under construction.

"Since the day Poland was invaded, we have more than doubled the size of the regular Army. Adding to that our federalized National Guardsmen. our armed land forces now equal more than 436,000 enlisted men.

"The Defence Commission," the President asserted, "is getting things done with speed and efficiency. More than $3,000,000,000 worth of defence contracts have been let."

He declared that charges that conscripts would not be properly housed represented "the most inexcusable kind of unpatriotic misstatement of fact." Housing for 930,000 soldiers will be completed by January 5, he explained.—United Press.

Marshal Petain Threatens to Crush All Opposition to Reich Accord

Statement Directed at Colonial Dissidence and Any Divergent Opinion in France

Vichy, Oct. 31.

The French Government will crush any opposition, at home or in the colonies, to Franco-German economic and political collaboration, Marshal Philippe Petain said yesterday.

In the sternest public statement since he assumed full powers of French leadership, Marshal Petain said all powers would be crushed which opposed fulfilment of his pledge of French collaboration with Germany in the peaceful reconstruction of Europe.

Marshal Petain assumed full authority for such a policy and at the same time cleared his ministers of any responsibility for his statement.

Marshal Petain's statement was directed at any colonial dissidence or divergent opinion in France.

Earlier, Marshal Petain issued an emergency decree suppressing all colonial general councils or local assemblies and concentrated the power of authority in the hands of colonial governorrs who are directly responsible to the Vichy Government.

The measure was one of the strongest taken thus far against spread of the De Gaulle secession movement.

Meanwhile M. Pierre Laval, the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, continued his multiple contacts with German authorities in Paris in examination of practical means for enforcing Marshal Petain's decision to work with Germany.—United Press.

Greek Situation Like Big Jig Saw Puzzle, Says Commentator

Italians Believed to Be Ready in Libya and Albania For Big Attacks; Enigma of 70 German Divisions

London, Oct. 31.

THE opposing forces in the Mediterranean theatre of war are so scattered that the situation resembles a gigantic jigsaw puzzle. When Italy declared war, an immediate attack from the Albanian frontier was expected. This, in conjunction with a move of Marshal Graziani's armies in northern Africa, would have kept the British Navy busy.

Neither has yet materialized though there is no possible doubt that the Italians are ready in Libya and Albania. Libyan reports mention dilatory road-making activity near Sidi Barrani but there is apparently lack of initiative on land and in the air. Albanian reports suggest that the Italians are uneasy about the Albanians. The advance of large forces to Salonika might make long communication lines vulnerable to hostile Albanians, though it appears Italy's best chance would be an immediate attack before the Greeks have time to complete mobilization.

A real enigma is offered by the presence of 70 German divisions in the the Balkans. Many are assembled on the borders of Hungary and Yugoslavia while mechanized units are in the border towns of German Carinthia. What is the plan for which these vast forces (at least a million men) are intended?

"Toeing the Line"

Turkey is ruled out as an immediate German objective for the present at least for there is only a small number of troops in Rumania. Not so Yugoslavia as every German military move suggests pressure against that country. Yugoslavia's army is in a very difficult position. Hungary and Bulgaria both fit into the puzzle more easily. Both will "toe the line" whatever action Germany may suggest.

There are signs of improving Russo-Turkish relations and the question is asked whether or not Russia is nervous in connection with German intentions. Geography may be an important factor in Balkan developments. Hungary is flat and Yugoslavia mountainous. The Italians could only invade Greece by marching eastwards towards Salonika or southwards towards the Gulf of Corinth. Salonika is bound to be the main objective. It is one of the most important outlets of Yugoslav trade and may again become an important war valve.

But whatever the Italians may do, those 70 German divisions must be watched. They may be there for movements through Hungary and Rumania towards Thrace or for a march through the Ukraine to southern Russia in search of oil.

No indication favouring one or the other of these speculations is visible, but all are distinctly possible. Finally there is the incalculable factor of the weather. Deep snow lies on Greek mountains while other parts of the Balkans are wet and cold. This is usually a preliminary to nasty weather. This may persuade the Germans to attempt to repeat their Norwegian success but it is more likely that it will cause them to wait for spring.—Reuter.

British Fleet Are In Good Hands

Sir Andrew Cunningham, Admiral Tovey Both Have Distinguished Careers

London, Oct. 31.

With the unprovoked Italian attack on Greece, naval operations are likely to assume major importance. With Sir Andrew Cunningham as Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet, and Vice-Admiral J. C. Tovey as Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, operations will be in good hands.

Sir Andrew Cunningham is a man of wide knowledge and interests and possessed of a fierce energy, power of quick decision and infinite resource. He holds what is probably a record in service as from 1911 until 1914 he was in continuous command of the ship—the destroyer Scorpion.

Distinguished Record

In the last war Sir Andrew Cunningham distinguished himself in the Gallipoli campaign and after the evacuation commanded a small detached force in the Ægean Sea. After various appointments he became Rear-Admiral commanding destroyers in the Mediterranean, and in 1926 Vice-Admiral commanding battle-cruiser squadrons in that sea, becoming Commander-in-Chief about a year later.

Vice-Admiral J. C. Tovey, who recently became Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, is another destroyer officer. He greatly distinguished himself at Jutland when commanding the Onslow, and this ship is referred to in a despatch by the Rear-Admiral commanding a light cruiser squadron in the battle.

Destroyer's Courageous Attack

"I should like," the Rear-Admiral recorded, "to bring to your attention the action of a destroyer—name unknown—which we passed close in a disabled condition, soon after 6 p.m. She apparently was able to struggle ahead again and made straight for the Derflinger to attack her. The incident appeared so courageous it seems desirable to investigate it further." The destroyer was the Onslow.

Vice-Admiral J. C. Tovey commanded the Rodney between 1932 and 1934 and has also been Rear-Admiral commanding destroyers of the Mediterranean Fleet.—British Official Wireless.

R.A.F. Active Over Libyan Regions

Italians Face Difficulty In Seasonal Dust Storms

Cairo, Oct. 31.

Widespread attacks on military targets in Libya are announced by an R.A.F. communique issued here last night.

Among the objectives raided were Derna, where considerable damage is believed to have been caused to shipping, Tobruk, where naval barracks were damaged, and Sollum and Gazala, where large fires were started. A bomb fell among aircraft on the ground at Mersa Matruh. Many reconnaissance flights are also reported. All British aircraft returned.

A new danger confronts the Italian troops in the western desert, namely, the dust storms raised by the high south winds which at this time of the year often arise without warning.

In addition to other difficulties these storms immobilize mechanized vehicles. The dust causes radiators to boil forcing the drivers of tanks, armoured cars and transports to stop their engines every 15 minutes.

Aircraft can still operate, the dust only being raised to a height of 150 feet, but in some quarters it is believed, mechanized land operations, even on a small scale, will be impossible during the continuance of these dust storms.—Reuter.

The bulk of the American evacuees from North China will proceed by train to Chinwangtao on November 15 where they will board the liner Mariposa, 9,000-tons.

The group is expected to consist of 300 Americans from Tientsin and 100 from Peiping. Subsequent evacuations will be carried out by the liners Washington, 22,600-tons and President Taft which are due to arrive in China ports during November.—Domei.

London Fire Dept. Are "Real Firemen"

New York Fire Chiefs Wax Enthusiastic Over London Brigade's Efficiency

London, Oct. 31.

Three New York firemen here to learn how the London fire department fights back the Blitzkrieg, yesterday said they were convinced they had found "a bunch of real firemen."

The firemen, sent here by Mr. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the Mayor of New York, are Battalion Chief Daniel Deasy, of the Bronx Battalion; Chief Frederick Weidemeyer, of the Marine Division, and Fireman George Scott, who will write a report of their two month tour.

Hitherto the men have been studying organization of the London department and surveying damage, but before they leave they expect to ride the fire engines with the London brigade and see actual operations in progress.

Impossible Task Overcome

"The pupil must come to the master to learn," said Chief Deasy, the trio's spokesman. "From what we have seen they have overcome an impossible task here with great success.

"I do not know any words that can express our gratification at seeing a job so well done," he told British and American correspondents.

"We admire particularly the speed with which they get work done efficiently and bring order out of chaos. Everything has been foreseen in such detail that there seems to be no excitement on the scene of a fire," Chief Deasy said.

"We might have more excitement in New York at a little fire than they have here at what we'd call a 'two hundred pumper.'"

Less Damage Than Expected

Effects of the bombing on the whole are less than the New York firemen expected, Chief Deasy said, terming it a tribute to the speed with which the London department cleared up debris from bomb-set fires so that the next morning the buildings look like a house being razed at home."

The London auxiliary war-time fire department system might well be adapted for use in American forest fire regions, Chief Deasy said.

Asked whether they had had an invitation from the Berlin fire department to inspect the Nazi fire fighting system, Chief Deasy said, "Well, they probably would send it on the sort of paper that comes from Hades."

British correspondents were interested in whether the nightly anti-aircraft barrages disturbed their sleep.

"I'm a pretty good sleeper," Chief Deasy replied, "but I'm not that good."—United Press.

U.S. Fleet Train Enlarged

Col Knox Says Vessels Ready to Give Help in Any Naval Operations

Washington, Oct. 31.

Thirty one auxiliary vessels to supplement the United States fleet train, based at Hawaii for service anywhere in the Pacific, have been acquired by the Navy, Col. Frank Knox, the secretary of the Navy, announced yesterday.

Col. Knox said the auxiliary vessels would be used in connection with fleet operations, including any manoeuvres in Philippine waters.

The majority of the ships are oil tankers and provision vessels. Eleven of them are rated as "principal" ships, thus raising the total principal auxiliary vessels to 22, the majority of which are large, fast tankers.

The United States fleet train already is sufficient to give a good account of itself in an "emergency," Col. Knox said, but it was increased in order to serve any territories of the United States in any emergency.

The newly acquired vessels will be based at Hawaii but will be used considerably for traffic with the mainland, Col. Knox said.

Fleet acquisitions since October 18, include a refrigerator ship and six transport vessels.

Total fleet acquisition since October number 38 vessels, including two 6,085-ton general store ships, one 6,209-ton reprigerator unit, nine 11,500-ton oil tankers, three 8,378-ton transports three 9,359 transports, 14 mine sweepers, each of about 1,500 tons, four district craft of unspecified tonnage and two submarine chasers.—United Press.

Great Damage Done by Floods in South Of France Said Beyond Description

Waters Rise Three Feet in 24 Hours; Bridge Swept Away; Much Reconstruction Begins

Vichy, Oct. 30.

The havoc wrought by the floods in the south of France recently is beyond all description, according to M. Rene Berthelot, the Minister of Communications, who has just returned here following a tour of inspection in the flooded areas.

On the northern slopes of Mount Canigou, in the Roussillon region, the waters rose three feet within 24 hours.

Railway tracks suffered the heaviest damage, particularly on the Perpignan-Cerbère line, where a bridge was swept away by the waters, causing a 600 foot gap in the tracks. Reconstruction work will take six months, although a temporary bridge thrown across the river Tech will permit a resumption of railroad communications with Spain within six weeks.

Also damaged was the railroad in the Cerdagne valley, which it will take three months to repair.

The French Government will allot Frs. 10,000,000 for repairs to damaged highways in the region. Of this sum Frs. 20,000,000 will be given over to a public works project which will make impossible a recurrence of the devastating floods.—Havas.

A CIRCULAR order, stating that every effort should be made to secure supplies of daily necessaries from occupied areas to prevent them from falling into the hands of the enemy, was issued to various municipal and provincial authorities in war zones on Tuesday by the Ministry of Economic Affairs, states a Chungking message to the "Sin Wan Pao." A revision of the lists containing items of goods which are prohibited from being imported and exported was made recently by the Ministry to enable the Chinese authorities to secure the supplies of goods they may require.

Wednesday after having first fallen back slightly in conformity with plans already drawn up, states a High Command communique.

"Greek fire" it is stated "stopped the movement of Italian columns. On the rest of the front the day was quiet. Irregular bands are operating with the enemy.

"Enemy airmen indiscriminately bombed Patras, machine-gunning the inhabitants and destroying a few houses. Several open towns with no military were also bombed. In one a school was destroyed.

"One of our aeroplanes, which engaged enemy fighters over Albanian territory, has not returned," the communique concludes.—Reuter.

Greek Communique

Athens, Oct. 31.

The Army Staff headquarters denied a foreign report that Italians had driven Greek forces back 30 miles in the Ioannia sector.

Meanwhile military authorities issued an official communique that hostilities on the night of October 28 were confined to "local contacts."

"On the night of October 28 activities were restricted to local contacts," the communique said.

"In the course of yesterday the enemy employed powerful forces of light and heavy artillery at Epirus," the announcement said.

"Our own movements were carried out in accordance with a previously agreed plan," the communique said.

"The situation in western Macedonia is unchanged, it was announced, "Activity of enemy aircraft was very slight."—United Press.

Stubborn Resistance

Djakovica, Yugoslavian Frontier, Oct. 31.

Greek troops furiously resisted Italian advances along the Greek-Albanian frontier yesterday, even counter-attacking Italian outposts themselves, said reports here. Italian troops were said to have occupied several Greek towns near the frontier but to have suffered comparatively heavy losses in doing so.

Three waves of five Italian planes each were said to have bombed the canal at Corinth yesterday afternoon. Only one house was damaged in the attack, said reports.

Forty-two Italians were said to have been killed and 60 wounded when Fascist troops occupied the Greek town of Breznica, an important strategical road junction on the Greek-Albanian frontier. Twenty-three Greeks were killed and 40 were wounded in the encounter, said reports.

Italian troops also took the Greek town of Janari after a heavy, two hour battle late on Tuesday, said reports. Seven Greeks were said to have been killed and 20 were wounded. Italian losses were said to have been heavier.

Advance Hampered

At dawn on Tuesday Fascist troops occupied the frontier port of Smernes, said reports.

The Italian advance from Nanari was said to have been hampered by strong Greek resistance and the absence of any good road through Greek territory.

An Italian detachment from the Albanian frontier town of Nikolica yesterday morning is said to have succeeded in crossing the border but lost 60 soldiers killed and 80 wounded when they were badly defeated by Greek troops attacking from the towns of Pilkal, Slimica and Fusima. Three Greeks were said to have been wounded in the encounter.

Italians near the Albanian town of Konispoli, on the frontier, opened heavy mountain artillery fire on the small Greek port of Saiadi on Tuesday night.

Greek artillery replied immediately and a four hour artillery duel was said to have ensued. A Greek gunboat stationed at Saiadi participated in the duel, said reports.

Greek forces persistently attack Italian outposts and guard detachments in Albania near the Greek frontier yesterday, said other reports.

Italians bombed the Tatoi aerodrome at Athens on Tuesday at 6 p.m. but no serious damage was inflicted, said reports.—United Press.

Weather Favours Greeks

Belgrade, Oct. 31.

Fierce battles raged in the Korca and Lerina areas, where the Greeks were reported to be harrassing the Italians, Yugoslav newspaper correspondents said last night.

The weather has been favouring the Greeks along the Yugoslav-Greek frontier where adverse conditions limited aerial operations both on Tuesday and early yesterday, they reported.

The thunder of artillery throughout Tuesday night and yesterday was heard in the Korca district of the Albanian-Greek border where furious battles were under way, the "Politika" correspondent at Dragos on the Yugoslav-Greek frontier reported last night.

The correspondent said that he had seen signs of serious fighting in the Korca district where the Greeks apparently were doing exceptionally well.

Meanwhile, the "Vreme" correspondent on the Yugoslav-Greek border declared that the Italian attack was apparently directed against Lerina.

Italians Said Retreating

Gunfire was audible in the Lerina area all day on Tuesday and even in the early hours of Wednesday, he reported.

The Greeks, unconfirmed reports said were pushing the Italians toward Korca and the Italians were rushing reinforcements toward this district, the "Vreme" correspondent said.

The Greeks, the correspondent added, were also reported to be concentrating in the Prepan Lake region and in the mountains between the villages of Nivica and St. Peter. These reports, however, lacked confirmation, he added.

The Yugoslav-Greek frontier has been closed for railway traffic, presumably because Greece needs the locomotives and rolling stock to transport troops.

The Italians have been hampered by adverse weather conditions and their aerial units were grounded practically all day on Tuesday and early yesterday, the "Vreme" correspondent said.—United Press.

Heavy Gunfire on Border

Belgrade, Oct. 31.

Cannonading was clearly heard yesterday near Lake Presba, the junction of the Greek-Albanian-Yugoslav frontiers. Heavy Italian concentrations are reported at Korca. The attack is believed to be directed towards Florina, where mountains and bad weather are unfavourable for operations.

Observers on the frontier state that fields on the Greek side are deserted as a result of the departure of all able-bodied men to join their units. All of them, it is added, depart with a song on their lips. All railway traffic across the frontier has been suspended pending mobilization. In the meantime, the large Greek colony in Yugoslavia is anxiously awaiting reopening of the frontier in order to join the Colours.—Reuter.

Greek Bombers Active

Athens, Oct. 31.

Swooping low and firing their machine-guns, three of the Greek small stock of bombers yesterday morning carried out a successful action by breaking up a force of Italian troops, which was coming up to support attackers on the western sector of the northern front.

All three machines returned although one was riddled with bullets and one of the crew was seriously wounded.

It is stated here that although the total number of Italian troops engaged against Greece is considerable, they are mostly in advance posts on the Greek side of the frontier.

Patras was bombed five times yesterday, but there was only one casualty as most of the inhabitants had been evacuated after Monday's air raid.

Great Britain is already taking steps in fulfilment of her promise of financial aid, it is learned here.

Sirens Wail in Athens

An air-raid alarm lasting half an hour was sounded here at 4.20 p.m. yesterday. There was no gunfire.

The public reached shelters more quickly than on the occasions of former alarms, having been impressed by the casualties at Patras, which were largely caused by sightseers remaining in the streets. It is now learned in authoritative quarters that 100 people were killed and 280 persons wounded at Patras.

That an Italian submarine was responsible for the unprovoked sinking in peace-time of the Greek light cruiser, Helle, off the island of Tinos last August, was revealed by the High Command of the Greek Navy yesterday. Fragments of two torpedoes picked up after the attack were found by experts to be of Italian manufacture.

An announcement was not made earlier "for reasons of policy which no longer exist."—Reuter.

Metaxas Addresses Army

Athens, Oct. 30.

A proclamation, in which the Greek soldiers were congratulated for their magnificent stand against the invading Italian armies, was addressed to the Greek army today by General John Metaxas, the Greek Premier.

"Today, your hearts of steel defended the sacred soil of the motherland," General Metaxas said. "I salute you most warmly. I believe that every Greek, from the King to the most humble citizen, proudly backs you. Remember that you have the glorious opportunity to write your name in golden letters in the pages of Greek history, besides those of the heroes of Marathon, the heroes of 1821, and the heroes of other victorious wars."—Havas.

Soviet Planes Arrive

Salonika, Oct. 31.

In the last few days 134 Soviet war-planes are reported to have arrived in Greece. This is in conformity with a recent Soviet-Greek agreement.—Reuter.

Slow Developments

London, Oct. 31.

Military dvelopments on the Albanian-Greek frontier are progressing very slowly, writes Reuters diplomatic correspondent. There is no evidence yet of blitzkrieg tactics and Greek resistance is being maintained. It may be that Italy is hoping Greece will give way to moral pressure backed by military threat, the correspondent adds.

The fact that the German Minister has remained in Athens would seem to confirm that the partners are still hoping to win a cheap victory. But Greek reaction has hitherto been exceptionally strong and wholesome; backed by the might of Britain. Greece will give the Italians plenty of trouble, the correspondent concludes.—Reuter.

S.M.P. Annual Parade Takes Place Today

Council Chairman Will Present Medals

The annual parade of the Shanghai Municipal Police will be held at the drill hall instead of the Race Course at 2.15 p.m. today. Although the occasion is of informal character, it is understood that representatives of various local military bodies and the Council's Watch Committee will attend.

The transfer of venue from the Race Course was necessitated by the departure from Shanghai of the British Forces. A parade at the Race Course as in former years would require the presence of more men than at present available in the force.

The outstanding event will be the annual presentation of medals by Mr. W. J. Keswick, Chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council, to more than 90 members of the Municipal police force. Two Chinese members of the French Police here also will be the recipients of distinguished conduct medals. Seventeen members of the foreign branch of the Municipal Police also have been singled out for this distinction, while eighteen others will receive long service medals.

Mr. Keswick will be at the saluting base with Major K. M. Bourne, Police Commissioner. The police band will be in attendance.

Mr. Chang Kia-ngau, Minister of Communications of the Chinese National Government, returned to Lanchow Shensi, where he had been studying highway communications, states a message to the "Sin Wan Pao." He was accompanied by the Director of General Affairs of the Ministry and two Chinese highway technical experts.

From the slut she played in 1934 in "Of Human Bondage," to the chaste governess, loved and in love, this year in "All This, and Heaven Too," Miss Bette Davis has gone a long way, having won several Academy awards. Yesterday, giving an outstanding performance, she began a long engagement with Mr. Charles Boyer at the Nanking and Cathay Theatres in the latter picture. Her interpretation of "Mademoiselle" Henriette is really a greater test for her histrionic ability because on no occasion throughout the film of 143 minutes screening, does she have recourse to the tantrums and hysteria, which have been a forte before. Instead she delineates the school-teacher and governess with the fine shadings of a gentle woman—even in occasional altercations with the Duchess, she states her position with firmness, but without rancour. Mr. Boyer as a mid-19th century French Duke, who falls in love with the governess of his children, moderates his ardour, at the same modulating his voice to an even tenor, the timbre rather than volume, expressing his emotions. For each of them, spiritually in love, not allowing physical passion to overcome them, is a true test of stage technique and a greater one on the silver screen—that their artistry meets all demands is proof of their sheer interpretive gifts. The Duke's murderous anger overcomes him once, but the director mercifully omitted the actual crime. The parting of the governess and the Duke—he on a suicide's deathbed—is a masterly bit of cinematic endeavour.

Aside from the stars, great credit attaches to the fine portrayal of Miss Barbara O'Neill as the sharp-tongued Duchess who, jealous of the unphysical relations existing between him and the governess, which she cannot understand, gives vent to vituperative bursts of temper. She should win an "Oscar" as best supporting actress. Mr. Jeffrey Lynn, perhaps should have lived a century ago—his acting is so sympathetic and in keeping with the role, whereas in some of his modern types his gentleness does not always seem to fit. As the youngest and perhaps the oldest of the film, Miss Weidler and Miss Helen Westley achieve honours. Those in Shanghai who remember Mrs. Gardner Crane's work on the stage will recognize her as Mme Gauthier, the innkeeper's wife, and will feel sure from her "bit" part that she has a Hollywood future. The general excellence of the casting and high standard of "All Too" will be realized, when it is seen that such outstanding players as Messrs. Henry Daniell, Henry Davenport and Montagu Love and Miss Janet Beecher have quite subordinate character parts. The "flashback," though rarely employed, is used here with the maximum effect, inasmuch as tragedy is not its immediate basis. The photography is superb, direction masterly and the film may be characterizesd as absorbing and excellent but that vital spark is missing, which permits the application of "great."—C.S.H.

Tragic Death of Kent Causes No Disruption In Regular Service

Chungking, Oct. 31.

The tragic death of Mr. W. C. "Foxy" Kent, popular young American pilot of the China National Aviation Corps who was killed on Tuesday when the plane he was piloting was shot down by Japanese aircraft near Kunming, is causing no disruption to the air—passenger and mail—services between Chungking, Hongkong and Kunming, which the China National Aviation Corporation is operating. All the American pilots of the Company are continuing to fly the airliners as usual according to schedule.

Aeroplanes of the company left today for Hongkong and Kunming on schedule, while aeroplanes of the company are also arrived at Chungking from Hongkong and Kunming.

A final check-up on the casualties list, occasioned by the shooting down of the "Chungking," reveals a total of ten persons killed, including eight passengers (six men, one woman and a baby), "Foxy" Kent, and also the air hostess, Miss Lu Mei-ling, who was on the point of leaving the service of the company to be married at Hongkong, this trip being her last.

One of the surviving passengers was seriously injured and another passenger was also injured, while the co-pilot, Mr. Hsu Hsing, the radio operator. Mr. Lin Ju-liang, escaped uninjured.—Reuter.

Patient Who Stole Own Teeth Fillings Lands in Court

Judge Helmick Passes Suspended Sentence After Pointing Out Defendant Took Law Into Own Hands

"I BELIEVE that he owes me money. I gave him U.S.$64 and all I have got is a bad mouth and two other dentists told me what I paid is twice too much and now he wants U.S.$70 more. It is like a surgeon cutting open your appendix and when he is half way through, he wants more money. That is terrible." These words were addressed to Judge Milton J. Helmick in the Supreme Court for China yesterday by Abraham Shapera after being arraigned on charges of feloniously taking and carrying away from the dental office of Dr. Norbert Lehrman, 788 Bubbling Well Road, one gold and one platinum filling altogether valued at U.S.$48.

The defendant admitted the charge with the qualifying statement that only the gold and one platinum and not the two gold fillings as alleged, were involved. "I paid him U.S.$64 to do about U.S$30 of work to my mouth. I gave him the money because I heard he was a very good dentist."

Shapera went on to say that when the work was partly done Dr. Lehrman asked him for another U.S.$70 and he saw another dentist who, he said, examined his mouth and remarked that it was ridiculous that he should pay more for U.S.$30 worth of work.

Pocketed Fillings

Reverting to the alleged theft of the fillings Shapera explained: "I went to his office, put the fillings in my pocket.

When he came in I said to him that I was taking the fillings because I thought I had paid double for them and was entitled to keep them. The reason I took them was because I didn't want to waste more time and didn't want to go through the trouble and agony of having it all done again. I more than paid for them and didn't take them by stealth. The doctor knows in his heart that I have more than paid him for the work he did. He has been charging me four or five times more than the proper prices and that is the truth, as I have told the police at the Central police station. I spent a night there and only had a thin blanket."

Mr. Chas. Richardson, Jr., Special Assistant to the District Attorney who filed the information against which a warrant was issued and subsequently executed for Shapera's arrest, interposed that defendant had opened the doctor's cabinet notwithstanding the protestations of the doctor's nurse and secretary and extracted the fillings. The doctor, who was out, was informed by the nurse on his return of the occurrence. The doctor demanded the return of the fillings, one of which belonged to another patient, Mr. Richardson said, adding that defendant refused to comply with the doctor's request. The doctor threatened to call the police, counsel continued, and defendant, according to the doctor, the nurse and secretary declared, "I will break up everything in your establishment here". The doctor realizing defendant's inability to pay for all the damage he would cause if he carried out his threat, counsel said, permitted Shapera to go, Mr. Richardson added.

Law Into Own Hands

Mr. Richardson pointed out that defendant had admitted taking the law into his own hands and the prosecution would suggest that he be punished to some extent. The section under which he was charged provided for a restitution of the article involved, if it is not recovered. In view of the present critical local situation, counsel suggested that justice would be served if defendant was given a suspended sentence contingent upon his making adequate restitution to the complainant. Two of the fillings were recovered by the police, Mr. Richardson explained, at the time defendant was arrested while the other fillings have disappeared.

Shapera then told the court that he handed two of the fillings over to the police and the third, which was about the size of a pin head he had thrown away while in the office of the dentist. In his opinion the fillings did not cost more than U.S.$2 a piece. "One dentist told me that maybe it was not platinum but iron," Shapera continued, adding, "My dentist got plenty of money from me, more than he ever dreamed of putting into my mouth. He owes me money and I would like to collect it from him. When I get back to San Francisco I will have my own dentist take care of me."

Larceny the Only Issue

Mr. Richardson then pointed out that the question of the doctor's services was not at issue, the only question was that of the taking away of the fillings.

Defendant reiterated that the reason he took the fillings was because he wanted to catch a ship as he was in a hurry to get away and that as matters stood he already was short of funds after paying for his hotel and would not have enough for car fare when he arrived in America, concluding with this remark, "I don't owe this man anything."

He explained that he was sick when he signed off a ship and was still sick.

In giving defendant a suspended sentence of 90 days contingent on his making restitution to the doctor in the sum of U.S.$7 and upon his being of good behaviour for the duration of his sojourn in Shanghai, Judge Helmick observed:

"In these proceedings we cannot determine such things as your civil rights. What we are interested in is that a citizen of the United States cannot take the law into his own hands. You cannot forcibly take property away. I don't know whether your contentions are right or wrong. People who have claims or grievances or differences regarding their transactions cannot get relief by committing larceny and this sort of thing cannot be permitted."

Shanghai Goods in Indo-China Held

Thousands of Dollars Involved in Ban by Admiral Decoux

Chinese merchants and native goods manufacturers in Shanghai, who have thousands of dollars worth of goods stranded in Indo-China as a result of recent developments in the French colony, were agog yesterday when they learned that authorities in Indo-China had made a last-minute decision not to allow them to ship their goods to Hongkong or Shanghai. The "Shing Sheng News Agency" stated that some circles asserted that the goods were prevented from being sent here by the French since recently the governor of Indo-China allowed such an arrangement.

The order forbidding the goods to be removed was said to have been issued by the governor last Saturday but local Chinese merchants were not informed of the reasons for such a step. They were very much surprised to learn of this since, through negotiations, they recently obtained permission from the governor to have their goods moved out. They have telegraphically petitioned the governor to rescind his new order so that goods, purely owned by merchants and native goods manufacturers, might be returned to them since they cannot be sent to the interior of free China."

It will be recalled in this connection that after several meetings, Chinese merchants here sent Mr. Tsao Yu-tsien to Indo-China for their goods' return. With the assistance of the Chinese Consul General and Chinese Chamber of Commerce in the colony, Mr. Tsao obtained permission from the authorities there to have the goods moved out. Arrangements were being made for shipping the goods to Hongkong and Shanghai when suddenly another order was issued prohibiting such a procedure. Mr. Tsao is returning to Shanghai to make a report.

Foreigner Suspected Of Armed Robbery

Sequel to Shooting of Korean by Police

An unrecognized foreigner, whose Chinese name is Lo Cheng, otherwise known as J. L. Lore, was brought before the First Special District Court yesterday on a writ of detention in connection with a series of armed robberies in which he was alleged to have taken part in connivance with a Korean who is recuperating from three gunshot wounds in a Hongkew hospital. Lo, until his arrest on Wednesday was connected with a foreign publication as a proofreader. Hearing was postponed for two weeks.

The case is an outcome of the detention by authorities several days ago of a suspicious Korean, who went to a North Honan Road hospital for treatment of three gunshot wounds. The police later worked on the theory that the Korean was wounded in a gun battle with the police on October 27 after he had robbed a Chinese restaurant (Wu Wei Tsai) in Bubbling Well Road of $500 and they also suspected that Lo was an accomplice in the case.

After the robbery, it was alleged, both the Korean and another man, believed to be Lo, tried to escape by riding in rickshaws. An accountant of the victimized restaurant chased them to Kuling Road where the police were informed of the matter. The police first shot one of the men down but when they were trying to arrest the other man he was nowhere to be seen. It was after the Korean had shown up in the San Min Hospital in North Honan Road for treatment the next day that the police obtained valuable clues leading to Lo's arrest.

It was alleged by the prosecution that many weeks ago accused met the Korean in an opium den in Canton Road and they decided to commit robberies together. In September of this year, they began their criminal career by robbing a restaurant in Canton Road of $250. They were also alleged to have committed other armed crimes until bad luck dogged them in the Bubbling Well Road armed robbery.

Lo was arrested in his North Honan Road home after he had been implicated by the detained Korean as his accomplice. A pistol and several rounds of ammunition were found in his possession.

Newsreels on the European War

New British War Effort Opening in Shanghai; Fine Picture Sequences

Yesterday evening at 6 o'clock in the auditorium of the British Press Attaché's Office, 28 The Bund, took place a first showing of newsreels on the European War, another facet of British war effort in Shanghai.

Opening to the public on Monday next, November 4, performances of these newsreels will be given twice daily at 6.15 and 9.15 p.m. on November 4, 5, 7, 11, 12, 14, and Mondays, Tuesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays thereafter. Changes of programmes will be announced in the press.

The programme will be approximately 45 minutes long, and will usually consist of subjects taken from newsreels of the leading film producers in the world. There will be no charge for admission but tickets must be applied for in advance either in writing or by calling at the Press Attaché's office. Owing to seating accommodation being limited, alternative dates should be stated when written applications are made.

Applicants will be required to give their full name, residential address, nationality and business connection (firm's).

Well Connected Stories

The pictures shown yesterday evening were not the usual sketchy and rather unconnected war pictures but intensely interesting sequences which give a real idea of how things are happening and the commentation is excellent. A start was made with "Squadron 992"—a balloon barrage squadron. Those who haven't seen balloons in movement will from these pictures understand how an affection for them can come into being, for they are weirdly alive. The non-stop drive of Squadron 992 is followed from the south of England to Edinburgh where a barrage was erected within 12 hours of the start from its base.

The Royal Air Force is starred and genuine battles with the enemy are shown. Spitfires and Hurricanes streak into action bringing their noises with them. An actual rescue of German airmen from the sea by British fishermen makes a dramatic little episode. British forces in the Middle East give an impressive effect of strength. Tanks in the desert behave much like destroyers in a rough sea. Australian and Indian troops go through desert manœuvres.

There are some first rate pictures of the British Fleet at sea, in action, in convoy work, deling with enemy aircraft. The thrill of the real thing is over them all, taken as they are in grey English weather with a pale sun floating like a ball in the hazy sky—in striking contrast to the "Newsreel" of commerce. In an interlude called "Italy Joins In" are some Italian propaganda pictures intercepted by the British forces, plus some Soho scenes after the declaration of war.

Czech Legion

A glimpse is given of a Czech legion landing in Britain; there are good close-ups of Mr. Winston Churchill inspecting troops and with the Navy, in which it is good to see that the Prime Minister looks remarkably happy and hearty. His Majesty the King comes on the screen and the two Princesses on their river trip; altogether a good show.

Congratulations must be offered to those responsible for the fitting up of the auditorium in which the pictures are shown. Surroundings do make a difference and a very pleasant setting has been devised. The old-gold wall hangings have been fire-proofed and exceedingly comfortable and good-looking chairs have been specially designed. Attendance at these war picture shows will be a very bright spot in life for Britons and their friends and each change of programme something to look forward to. The new departure is a tremendous step forward in the field of war pictures.

First Group of American Evacuees Leaving Today

Mr. Richard P. Butrick Among Passengers on ss. President Pierce; All Accommodation Full

MANY American evacuees will embark today in the ss. President Pierce, which is sailing for America at midnight. Although the ship's accommodation had been heavily booked for many months before the evacuation scheme was announced from Washington, room has been found for many others sailing under this scheme. No cots have been set up in the public rooms, as has been done on the ss. Monterey, which arrives in Shanghai tomorrow, and the ss. Mariposa. Passengers, however, are being packed into the staterooms, every available berth being used, an official of the American President Lines said yesterday, and the ship will be full to capacity when she leaves Kobe for America.

Americans will be embarking on the liner throughout the day, numerous tenders going to the ship, which is tied up in mid-stream. Among those leaving is Mr. Richard P. Butrick, former acting U.S. Consul-General here, and his family. The Pierce is on her ordinary run, and is not one of the special evacuation liners despatched from the U.S.A.

The ss. Monterey, which is due to arrive in port tomorrow from Kobe will be evacuating many Americans from Shanghai, although it is understood that accommodation on the liner is still available. She will sail from Shanghai on November 3.

ss. Washington Arrangements

The American President Lines announced yesterday details of the fares for the ss. Washington, one of the evacuation liners, which is scheduled to sail from Shanghai on November 21 for Los Angeles, via Manila. First Class accommodation is available at regular rates. Tourist Class accommodation, consisting of 298 beds, and 47 cots in rooms, is entirely open for Shanghai residents, fares ranging from U.S. $240 to $260. Cots in Tourist Class cabins range from $190 to $210. European Third Class consists of 149 beds and 19 cots in rooms. Fares for this class are $150 for beds, and $100 for cots. Applications for this class already exceed capacity, however. The ss. Mariposa, which is scheduled to arrive here on November 10, will sail for San Francisco, via Chinwangtao, Kobe and Honolulu. Ample First Class accommodation is available on this ship.

Consular Communique

The following communiqué was issued by Mr. Frank P. Lockhart, U.S. Consul-General in Shanghai, to all Americans yesterday.

"The American Consulate General at Shanghai refers to its previous circulars addressed to Americans resident in this consular district communicating the advice of the Department of State to withdraw to the United States and advising that special shipping facilities were being made available. The Department of State in a recent telegram stated that it has the greatest sympathy for the hardships which many Americans will necessarily meet in withdrawing from the Far East but points out nevertheless that accommodations are being provided at regular conference rates with a reduction if emergency accommodations are used. To make the vessels arriving here available the Department of State found it necessary to guarantee the shipping companies against loss and the arrangements made will involve a loss to the Government of several hundred thousand dollars inasmuch as the fares paid will be insufficient to pay more than half the cost of the transportation provided.

For Women and Children

"This Consulate General, under instructions from the Department of State, desires again urgently to invite your attention to the desirability of taking advantage of shipping facilities now being made available as it will be obvious to all that no guaranty can be given that present accommodations will be available indefinitely. This advice applies particularly to women and children and to those men not detained by essential reasons.

"Information received today from the American President Lines indicates that there are still available a large number of both first and tourist class accommodations on the steamer Monterey scheduled to sail from Shanghai on November 3. The ss. Maripsoa is scheduled to sail from Shanghai on November 10 and the ss. Washington on November 21."

Monterey Leaves Yokohama

Yokohama, Oct. 31.

Bound for Shanghai, the Matson liner Monterey, the first American evacuee ship, slipped out of Yokohama harbour at 3 o'clock this morning, seven hours later then scheduled.

Aboard the 18,017-ton vessel were 58 Americans, mostly women and children, who joined the ship here last night. The number was said to exceed that which was previously announced. Among the passengers boarding here was Mr. F. W. Ayers, Superintendent of the Ford Motor Assembly Factory who sailed with his family.

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew visited the ship with his wife yesterday afternoon and remained aboard to converse with Mr. Noel Coward, noted British playwright, who, with the 116 other passengers arriving on the Monterey, was prevented from landing through lack of a visa.

It was recalled here that the American Consulate-General previously announced that the Monterey would have accommodations for 425 evacuees from Japan.—Domei.

Many Coastal Tubs Released

Five Portuguese Vessels Said to Have Been Sold To Japanese

It was learned yesterday that a number of foreign vessels which have been detained by the Japanese naval authorities have been released. Many of the coastal tubs were detained owing to the inability of the alleged foreign owners to satisfy the Japanese authorities of their ownership.

Shipping circles yesterday stated that five Portuguese boats or vessels flying the Portuguese flag plying the coastal trade have been sold to Japanese interests.

A year ago the Japanese authorities detained a number of small coasters when it was thought that the foreign ownership was purely nominal. It was alleged that some of the vessels were transferred by their Chinese owners to foreigners enjoying extrality rights.

Prior to the shipping ban enforced by the Japanese authorities from July 16, last, there was a scarcity of coasters and fantastic prices were paid for tubs and small vessels suitable for the coastal trade when the coastal shipping business was in its heyday. With the restrictions imposed by the Japanese naval authorities on coastal navigation the coastal business deterioriated rapidly and a number of vessels were lying idle in port for months.

Armed Kidnapping of Hotel Manager

Pandemonium reigned in the Wei Tsung Hotel on Hankow Road early yesterday morning when three kidnappers, two armed with pistols, dashed into the office, held the clerks at bay at the point of the gun and dragged the manager of the establishment into the street.

He was bundled into a waiting car and driven away before the terrified employees of the hotel informed the police of the occurrence.

Detectives of the Louza police station made enquiries at the scene of the crime and made a broadcast instructing all police officers to be on the lookout for the kidnappers' car which, it is believed, made for the direction of Hongkew.

Woodchoppers Crash American Club by Overwhelming Margin

League Championship Appears Foregone Conclusion; Marines Beat Lumberjacks to Keep Second Berth

If last night's form of the "Y" Woodchoppers be any criterion then the City Duck Pins League Championship is a foregone conclusion. Visiting the American Club alleys they rudely trounced the homesters by an overwhelming margin despite the fact that Tommy Butler was the low score man of the quintette. Pitching over the three- hundred mark the team played havoc with the pins with Inwood the high-man. Only three scores below the century were returned by the players.

The Marines held on to the second berth by noping out the "Y" Lumberjacks on the odd game by a bare total of six points. Here Katz of the Lumberjacks secured the high single of 121.

In the Maple Division of the "B" Division the Race Club Spares scored more than their opponents, the Columbia Country Club, on the final reckoning put the series by the odd game. Mayzar was outstanding returning singles over the century in the three games.

The Marine Officers took the lead in the Pine Division by defeating the Spares in the "Y" Flukes went under to the American Club on the final count.

Nearing completion is "Down Argentine Way," with some sing-able-hummable tunes by Gordon and Warren and a stellar cast headed by Don Ameche and Betty Grable and featuring Charlotte Greenwood. Carmen Miranda, J. Carrol Naish, Chris-Pin Martin, Leonid Kinsky, Henry Stephenson and Katharine Aldridge.

No Foundation to Basketball Rumour

The report stating that the Foreign Y.M.C.A. Invitation Basketball League may not be held his season was stamped as "without foundation" by Len Bright, Physical Director of the "Y", yesterday.

"It could as well have been stated that the League may be held," said Len Bright when questioned, "since it is natural that no definite conclusion can be made until the general meeting of the Foreign Y.M.C.A. Basketball Committee and the approval of the Council."

The meeting of the Basketball Committee, incidentally, was held yesterday evening at 7 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A., and the Committee's decision will be brought before the superior body for approval on November 8.

"Until then," Len Bright said, "it is pointless even to presume."

The Physical Director stated that there will be only one division this season if the Leagues is held, the usual "B" Division being blended into the senior division in order to keep down expenses.

Mr. Bright doubts that there will be two Foreign Y.M.C.A. representations in the League, stating that the "Y" Giants will probably wear Imca colors. "If there will be enough players," he said, "the "Y" Cubs will also field a team."

Week-End Teeing-Off Times at Hungjao

When applying for a starting-time, Members must make only one application for their match. It is constantly happening that the name of one person will appear in anything from three to five applications and it would seem that quite a number of Members make an application in case they may decide to play, but very often join up with another match and omit to let the Secretary know that the time which has been allotted to them will not be required. The starting sheet has shown sometimes that from six to eight times have become vacant though players to whom these times have been allotted joining up with other matches. Had the Secretary been informed that these times would not be used, he would have been able to give them to those players who drew unsuitable times.

"Y" Ladies Suffer First Defeat of Season

Departure of Two Members on Sunday Hastens Schedule; Possibility of Tie Foreseen

WITH the departure from Shanghai of Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Uhlinger on the S. S. Monterey on November 3, the "A" Division games in the Ladies Duck Pins League, where the "Y" Women's Sports Section is concerned, were advanced in order to enable a full completion of the schedule. Consequently their return match with the Columbia Country Club Blues was played off yesterday morning and that against the American Club Aces the day before.

The "Y" bowlers suffered their first defeat yesterday when the Columbian Blues, playing at home, took the last two games to nose out the potential champions. Only two century singles were registered during the entire match and these were bunched by Mrs. Collaco and Mrs. Zee in the first game which gave them a singleton.

Having only one more match to play off with the C.C.C. Reds this afternoon, which the "Ys" should have little difficulty in winning, playing on their own alleys, there is every possibility of a deadlock in the final league standings provided the American Club Aces or the C.C.C. Blues win the rest of their matches.

Champion Jockey Wins Cesarewitch

London, Oct. 31.

Britain's champion jockey, Gordon Richards, eluded bullets from a machine-gunning German plane yesterday and reached the race course in time to ride Hunters Moon to victory in the Newmarket Cesarewitch stakes.

Jockey Richards was hurrying to the Newmarket race course in an automobile when a German bomber roared low and machine-gunned the road. Richards leaped from the car, dived into a ditch and escaped the bullets.

He then rode Hunters Moon to win. Sir Pomm and King Legend ran second and third. Fourteen horses were in the race.

Racing gallantly under top weight, Hunters Moon led in the early stages of the race, but was challenged near the finish by Sir Pomm, who spurted hard to take the lead. Gordon Richards, however, quickly responded to the challenge and brought Hunters Moon home by a neck.—United Press.

Opportunities Made to Take

It requires energy to seize an opportunity—it is much easier for those who are leaving Shanghai to do some straight packing for the return to the U.S.A. and leave it at that. But there is an opportunity to seize. Things Chinese have a world appeal which is witness to the artistry which goes to the making of them. They have held a high place ever since there was trade with the Orient and there is no danger of their ever going out of fashion. On the contrary they increase in value with age.

Things for the house bought in America will certainly be good—but are not likely to increase in value with time, at any rate not until the days of the grandchildren which is rather longer than most of us care to wait. At any time in the present owner's lifetime they are inclined to be simply "second-hand." Things Chinese never become "second-hand." So much of value, too, can be packed into so little space.

There is another angle on goodbye shopping. A Shanghai fur coat is excellent value, very well calculated to keep the wearer warm in a cold winter, which is what she is probably heading for. Have you in your mind turned homeside fur coat prices into Chinese dollars? Do a little sum next time you are looking at the advertisement columns of the "New York Times." So, too, the Shanghai dressmaker can give first line cut and workmanship. You may be an evacuee—but it is nicer not to look like one.

Also in Shanghai now are really fine antiques and works of art brought here by refugees from Europe—family treasures that would never in normal times come within the ken of the stranger. These are bits of history that can be grasped and that stir the imagination and that really will be something for those grandchildren to thank you for.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Stock Exchange: A Question of Comment

To the Editor of the "North-China Daily News"

Sir,—Stock exchange reports make interesting reading when they are confined to facts and free of surmise. That published by you to-day indulges in surmise when it makes the observation, in reference to Wheelock's declaration of a small interim dividend, "that it is unusual to pay a very large interim, which could easily have been done". By what authority does the Stock Exchange make this statement? Its effect is likely to create a bullish tendency in the market which is not the function of a Stock Exchange. This must be left to the stock brokers and their clients who are free also to indulge in bearish tactics if it suits their purpose. And in future may I suggest that you be not made a party to such efforts and censor all words that make it appear that the Stock Exchange officials are in possession of privileged facts.

A Critique: What Was Meant

To the Editor of the "North-China Daily News"

Sir,—With reference to C.E.M.B.'s critique in your issue of today of "Tony Draws a Horse", I should very much like to know what the following means:—

The author, Lesley Storm, had done a good job here. She obviously does not share the tacit assumptions upon which our civilization operates, its contemporary style, its accepted purposes, its historic ethos. All of these, which for most of us lie below the threshold of our awareness, she sees in their external perspective. The modern western ways have not imposed upon her the internal illusion that, like the wind and the weather, they are indefectible, and thus she never looks upon them blankly with dull familiarity.

For Skein Holders: Way Out of Difficulty

To the Editor of the "North-China Daily News"

Sir,—In order to help A Slave and other skein holders like myself, I venture to put this short note in your esteemed paper so that A Slave might come across it and end his slavery by calling at Whiteaways, where I was accidently lucky enough to find a wool-winder which I purchased and I must say it certainly served my purpose.

Japan Urged to Claim Antarctic Regions

Explorer Commended for His Services

Tokyo, Oct. 31.

That Japan should claim the South Polar regions explored in 1912 was the belief expressed by Lieutenant Choku Shirase (retired), noted antarctic explorer, who was honoured by the Government here Tuesday with public commendation for his services.

Lieutenant Shirase, who is 79 years old, declared, "I am deeply impressed with the public commendation. When I led my expedition in 1912, I never dreamed that interest in the antarctic would become so widespread."

The explorer revealed hat he presented his opinion to the Foreign Minister, Mr. Yosuke Matsuoka, that Japan should claim as its own the antarctic regions which he explored in 1912. Former Foreign Ministers had taken no notice of his views Lieutenant Shirase said, but he believed that Mr. Matsuoka will take an interest in the matter.—Domei.

Manoeuvres Against Britain

Axis Powers Want to Cut British Oil Supplies

Bucharest, Oct. 31.

Two vast manoeuvers against Britain, one in the Pacific and the other on the road to India, are necessary to subdue England, the newspaper "Curentul" said yesterday.

The necessity of such manoeuvres "explains the role of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo agreement." Mr. Seicaru said in the editorial entitled "A New Phase of the War."

"The military problem of the Axis Powers is now the occupation of all petroleum regions in Iraq, Iran and the vicinity of the Suez Canal, which would be a great blow to England or to America's intervention in the Pacific," said the editorial.

"England's force is not in England proper but in Asia and the colonies," said the editorial. "This necessitates vast manœuvres against England, one in the Pacific—this explains the role of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo agreement—the second on the road to India.

"In this gigantic plan the Axis enters a new element which would be realization of a plan, namely, the Arabic population," the editorial said.

"It is recalled that during the last war England counted on the Arabians, but today the Arabians are hostile to England all the way from the Suez Canal to the Persian Gulf."—United Press.

We understand that a rifle competition in connection with the S.V.C. is arranged for the end of November, Adjutant Brewer will give a Commander's Cup, and Captain Kidner, as an Instructor's Prize, a small sporting snider rifle. The ladies will also give a prize; and it is expected that the Municipal Council will give a challenge cup for company squads. In addition to these, we hear that the Silk-Inspectors of Shanghai purpose giving a cup; so that the meeting should be a successful one, specially as the suspension of class firing during the Race week will be open to all members of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps who have gone through musketry drill, and some of them, we believe, to all comers shooting with military rifles.

IMPARTIAL NOT NEUTRAL

DOUBLE-FACED DICTATOR

Hitler, now in the role of an appeaser, is speaking with two voices, one with which he seeks to woo France into closer co-operation with the Axis against Britain, and the other with which he endeavours to allay Italian anxieties lest Marshal Pétain be admitted into the Axis as a partner. Obviously if such were to occur France could hardly be expected to make those territorial concessions which Mussolini desires. Marshal Pétain in his broadcast over the Lyons radio let the cat peep out of the bag. He claims to have been under no Diktat from Hitler, and that of his own free will he had "entered the road of collaboration" without pressure. In return he says France's sufferings will be lightened, the lot of French prisoners improved, the burden of occupation expenses lessened, the demarcation line may be rendered more flexible, and the administration's provisioning of the territory under it facilitated. And finally he appealed to Frenchmen to trust,—to trust him while he apparently is trusting Hitler.

What Der Führer has apparently been attempting to do has been to persuade Italy to sacrifice her territorial claims against France. That he has had to abandon, and he was further faced with the recalcitrance of Italy which opposed any active or passive assistance from France in the prosecution of the war, obviously fearing that there would be too many to share the swag in the unlikely event of there being any swag to share. Hence Hitler's hurried visit to Florence. He has been making a number of trips recently and doing all the persuading, where but a very short while ago he ordered foreign statesmen to come to him and listen to his terms. Then the German press set out to soothe Italian feelings. The "Berliner Boersen-Zeitung" significantly asserted that while France had been offered participation in the Axis system if she broke with Britain, Germany promised nothing regarding a later peace. Hitler would never say such a thing publicly, but there is no reason why the strictly controlled German press should not tell the Italians that after all peace with France had still to be negotiated, the implication being that then would be the time to betray France and satisfy Italian desires.

That is quite clear in the message from Zurich, and is borne out by a Berlin despatch to the official news agency, which concludes "The new European dispensation cannot fail to take account of the fact that it was France which desired, provoked and lost the war, and that for this she must pay in full. On these points there exists no possibility of discussion with the present directors of French policy." If that means anything at all, it must surely mean that while temporary modifications of the armistice may be made in an attempt to align France on the side of the Axis, when the time comes to negotiate peace Germany assures Italy that both will receive their full pound of flesh. In other words Italy is being told that it is not her role to be "sold down the road," but that that is the ultimate destination of France. Marshal Pétain quite clearly expects immediate results from immediate collaboration, but Berlin tells Italy that all that was discussed was a "general plan of the part France wishes to play in the new European order following the Axis victory."

Hitler may succeed in deluding Marshal Pétain, who speaks so plaintively about the necessity for trust, but if Mussolini allows himself to be persuaded by such specious behaviour,—knowing the inner workings of the Hitlerian technique as he must—it can only be because he is in a position to be able to do nothing about it. The whole issue cannot be put any plainer than this:—If Marshal Pétain's impressions of what has happened are correct, then Hitler, through authoritative German quarters, is lying to Italy: if he is telling the truth to Mussolini, then he is fooling Marshal Pétain. The latter is the most probable, though the possibility of the former being the case cannot be disregarded, for Hitler is playing his own hand, and will continue to do so, whether it be with his ally, or against him, for, after all, Italy should not be able to give Germany much trouble in the unlikely event of an Axis victory. She could be then disposed of out of hand, which, of course, would be the final and largest betrayal of all.

BRITAIN AIDS GREECE

"Fifth Columnists" and the enemy press are asking why Britain is not aiding Greece, according to the guarantee given to that country. They want to know where the British navy is, and why it has not immediately gone into action to destroy the Italians. They quote eye-witness accounts of Italians landing troops on the Greek mainland as seen from the Island of Corfu, where there appears to have been no interference with troop movements. It should not be forgotten, however, that there has been no need for British interference with Italian troop movements between Italy and Albania, until the attack was made on Greece. The British navy's major task before the unwarranted invasion of Italy's neighbour was to prevent reinforcement of the Italian forces in Libya and other points on the African continent. And this it seems to have fairly effectually performed.

The fact that within a few hours of the outbreak of war between the Italians and the Greeks the British had mined some of the most important sections of the Greek coast and had bombed the Italian air base nearest to the Greek capital, is proof enough that a scheme to thwart Italian ambitions in the Ægean sea had been thought out and discussed for many weeks beforehand. The Italian move was not unanticipated. It is freely surmised that many of the reinforcements sent to Egypt were designed more to provide the nucleus of an expeditionary force into Greece or Turkey than to hold up the threatened campaign against the Suez canal, which Marshal Graziani is painfully and slowly attempting to prosecute. The situation must, however, be left to work itself out. There can be little doubt that the British position in the eastern Mediterranean at the moment is not an easy one, but there can be equally little doubt that such an eventuality is no surprise, and that the British authorities have taken the requisite precautions.

The comment made by the Soviet army newspaper "Red Star" is interesting in this connection. Considering the intimate relations between Soviet Russia, Turkey, and the Balkans, it is not improbable that the comments of this paper are based upon authentic information supplied by either the Turkish or the British General Staffs to the Soviet Government. The confidence expressed that Greece will be able to make a long campaign out of the Italian invasion, in contradiction to the Italian claims of a victory within three weeks, therefore, has additional significance. The Soviet Government seem to be aware that Britain and Greece, and if necessary Turkey, are ready for anything the Italians might attempt. This is, of course, from a purely military point of view, and does not take into account the imponderable effects of "pressure," whether diplomatic or uncloaked, upon the neighbours of Greece. So far as this factor is concerned, the Nazis and Fascists have once again the advantage of "surprise." The Soviet army mouthpiece expects that Britain will send aid to Greece via Piræus, Volou, and Salonika. If this is done the Italian naval bases in the Dodecanese will be cut off and become largely useless. This is an outcome which would please the Turks, and also the Russians, who have consistently viewed with alarm the Italian possession of bases which might threaten the entrance to the Black Sea.

The questions which have been inspired in the Greek press as to the whereabouts of the British navy are doubtless being asked in the faint hope of obtaining an answer. The Italians would dearly love to know where the British fleet is stationed or concentrated. They are not likely to learn from such stupid propaganda, the object of which should be apparent to everyone. According to a German report, the British Mediterranean fleet in now concentrated at Gibraltar. Why it should be so is a little difficult to understand, and the report can be taken to mean no more than that the Germans wish it were true. With Sir Andrew Cunningham in command, the British fleet in the Mediterranean have an expert in the strategy on that area in control, and there may be little doubt that most of the moves which the Axis Powers might make have been long foreseen. This is not written with any idea of underestimating the difficulties the Greeks and the British must face in this area. But if there is any suggestion that the Axis has done anything clever in causing the war to spread into this part of the world, and stands to gain anything easily thereby, it cannot be too vigorously repudiated. If the position of the Allies has been made difficult, how much more so has the position of the Italians, who are now committed to do something more than remain in their home ports?

Lord Beaverbrook's message of thanks to the British communities in China for the last remittance of £10,000 sent home by the committee of the Voluntary War Contribution Fund is significant enough to bear repetition:—

> Ever generous in their support of the Royal Air Force the British communities in China bring continuing inspiration to the people of Britain who today sustain the full fury of the Nazi onslaught stop Their contributions for the purchase of aircraft bring nearer the day when the Luftwaffe will be driven for ever from the skies and when our Air Force will force the evil men who have spread carnage over Europe to beg for the pity they will not deserve stop Our gratitude for this further gift is deep indeed—Beaverbrook.

Already £72,000 have been remitted home to purchase aeroplanes, and it is hoped that by November 15 another £10,000 will be ready for forwarding to the same destination. The marvellous feats of the R.A.F., the manner in which they have fought off the attacks on Britain of the numerically superior enemy, the way in which they are carrying the battle into enemy territory, and the great individual gallantry of the men, for whom these machines are being bought, should serve to impress upon all Britons in China that there can be no question of any slackening of their efforts at this stage. That £10,000 must be reached by the date fixed, even if it requires an extra effort, for Lord Beaverbrook has clearly shown how deeply the assistance which Britons in China are giving is appreciated. He has also emphasized how essential it is that this contribution to the streams of money which are going home from loyal Britons the world over should be continued, and it needs to be pointed out that it is by such means as contributions to this fund that Britons in China, comparatively safe and sheltered, demonstrate a community of interests with their fellow nationals at home who are gallantly enduring all the enemy can do to them, and making such telling returns. It may be said that £10,000 represent a lot of dollars: it is a lot of dollars which is wanted.

British Sangfroid

That the Cesarewitch should ever have been run off at all is perhaps characteristic of the British, for they are reluctant at all times to permit interference with normal pursuits. Every week-end brings in reports of the various football matches played by the big teams. Dog racing is still conducted to some extent, and the fact that the Britons continue to pay so much attention to sport clearly indicates that, though Hitler's aeroplanes do seriously incommode them at times, they have not been sufficient to drive the people off the playing fields of the country. Richards is another example of the sangfroid with which these Britons go about their lawful occasions. Despite the fact that the road which he was taking to reach the course was machine-gunned by an enemy machine, the well-known jockey managed to escape the bullets, and, despite his hair-raising experience, managed to preserve sufficient coolness to steer his mount home first past the finishing post, making it the first occasion on which he has won this classic race. Tomorrow, weather permitting, crowds controlled as to numbers will doubtless watch their favourite football teams struggle for victory. Goering and his air force has up to the present been unable to stop them. Other sports will receive their fair share of attention despite the attentions of the enemy. It is as well that it should be so for the average Briton deprived of his sport, whether actively participating or merely watching loses one of his main forms of amusement. The enemy has not succeeded in doing that yet and is unlikely to be able to do so in the future. He has not even been able to force the London theatres, which are reported to be doing good business at somewhat changed hours, to close their doors, and it is good for "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and who would wish to be dull in such days as these?

STRAY NOTES

Weihaiwei, Oct. 11.—Was examining some acacia trees in my garden yesterday, trees torn and maimed by fuel stealers, when I found in the lower branches a most fascinating little nest: excluding the nests of humming-birds on the American continent, and excepting our little fantail Warbler's nests built among the fluffy grasses, it is the smallest nest I have ever seen. Made of some rough vegetable fibres plastered together with cobweb and spiders' egg cases, the whole structure, 2½ inches long and 1½ inches wide is slung like a tubby little coracle between two twigs: the edges are carefully bound to the twigs by cobweb twisted neatly round them, and although I had to handle the whole structure quite a lot in cutting it out of the tree, that frail binding has held firm. So now I am asking myself what bird can have made this? It is like a tiny model of an Oriole's nest, too small and the wrong shape for a Paradise Flycatcher's nest....and how could I have missed the activities of such a bird if it had nested in my garden? Trying to work this puzzle out, I first looked into the nest-building habits of every local bird and in desperation called for evidence from the gardener (this nest having been close to his cottage, so that he must have passed it every day). "My have see plenty time this small bird....he welly smallu..he have got yaller this side" (stroking his eyebrows)....all of which, of course, points to a Yellow-browed Willow-Warbler which I have often seen in my garden, and taken it for a late or early migrant. So off I rushed to "La Touche" for information: this little bird with the long name breeds in Eastern Siberia (which is disappointing)—but (here comes hope!) "Père David writes, on I don't know what authority, that some remain to breed in the wooded mountains of China." My garden does not pretend to be a wooded mountain...but I may have stumbled on to something new. But alas for my hopes! Another expert says that the nests of the Warblers are mostly domed or semi-domed and mine is an open "boat": I begin to feel that I shall finish up by mispronouncing that word "domed" when speaking of this nest.—E.S.W.

RADIO FIDELITY AIDED

New System Doubles Pitch Range

Dr. Edwin H. Armstrong, originator of present-day FM (frequency modulation) broadcasting, has just received a patent for an improved method of FM transmission and reception which is claimed to give extremely high fidelity. The new system permits transmission of the lowest to the highest pitched audible sounds, covering the entire audible range from 30 to 16,000 cycles, states the "New York Times." Present-day radios operating on amplitude-modulated radio waves cover but half this range. Because of this limitation, their fidelity of reproduction is not high.

In transmitting music or vocal sounds, the lower-pitched notes are readily broadcast and received, it is said. The impulses corresponding to the higher-pitched sounds are weaker. They get "lost" in the tube and circuit noises of the set, and are not heard in the receiver. In Dr. Armstrong's new method of FM broadcasting and reception the high-frequency sounds of the broadcasting band are amplified many times more than the low-frequency sounds. Then the frequency of the wave to be broadcast is varied by the amplified currents. This produces a wide band of frequency variations.

This wave is broadcast and when picked up at the receiver is amplified. The amplified currents are passed through a detecting device, where the frequency variations are converted into a band of currents of variable amplitudes. By this conversion distortions which would produce noises are suppressed. Now the low-frequency currents of the band are amplified to a greater degree than the high-frequency currents. Thus, it is said that both low-pitched and high-pitched sounds are reproduced, free from distorting noises, substantially as they go into the microphone at the transmitter.

Television Periscope for Submarines

A television periscope for submarines which would permit the boat to obtain a wide view of the surface while it itself lurked in the ocean depths beyond the reach of torpedos and shells is revealed in an American patent awarded to Harry E. M. Vestergren of Stockholm, Sweden.

The new periscope is a simplified television transmitter which includes a tele-pick-up tube similar to that used in television pick-up cameras. Mounted in a floating bell, the periscope floats upwardly when released from the conning tower of the submarine. It can be manœuvred to range the horizon. By means of mirrors in the bell, a view of the entire surface of the water is focussed on the photo-electric screen of the pick-up tube. Here the image is scanned by an electron beam to be converted into an electrical image which is sent down wires to the television receiver inside the submarine. On the fluorescent viewing screen of the receiver, the electrical image is reconverted into a visible image corresponding to the view on the surface of the water.

The floating periscope is connected by cables to the receiver. Since these may be unwound to any length, it is explained that the submarine may be at considerable depths and still see what is going on at the surface of the water.

The tele-periscope, it is revealed, may also be used on aeroplanes and airships flying above clouds. Lowered below the clouds by cables it gives the pilot of the craft which remains concealed by the clouds, a view of the terrain below.

Fairy Wishful Thinking

THE Fairy Wishful Thinking rode into our workroom on the back of a spirited butterfly, dismounted and smiled vaguely at us.

"Naughty, naughty," she said, wagging a tiny fat finger in our direction.

We asked wearily why we were naughty.

"Frowning again," said The Fairy, "and all for nothing."

We pointed out that we had quite a lot to frown about, as we had just received our final demand for income-tax. Also our feet hurt on account of being up all night with the Home Guard.

"All this Rumanian and Hungarian business is blowing up to something," said The Fairy. "Russia will have to step in to save herself from Germany. Then what will Germany do?"

We said we didn't know.

"Russia is well equipped now," The Fairy chattered on, "and Germany wouldn't be able to last long with all those untrained boys they use for airmen. And what are they going to do about oil?"

Again we said we didn't know, except that they seem to have done very well so far. We also asked The Fairy where she got the idea that German airmen were untrained.

"And then there's America," said The Fairy, ignoring our question, "even prominent Americans are now saying they'll soon be in the war."

To which we replied that if The Fairy was thinking of prominent Americans like Mr. Hearst, she should treat his remarks with the greatest reserve considering that he disliked us almost as much as we disliked Hitler. There was such a thing as deliberately creating false hopes in order to dash them down.

"Oh, you're just an old grouch," said The Fairy, bringing out her powder puff and stabbing at her podgy nose. "Most Americans are on our side, and they'll soon be in with us."

We agreed that most Americans are on our side, but pointed out that you can be on the side of your favourite boxer without jumping into the ring.

"Oh, you're hopeless," said The Fairy, mounting her restive butterfly. "I shan't come and cheer you up any more."

We said we hoped she wouldn't. And we are ashamed to confess that we put our tongue out at her as she rode away into the sunset.—By a British columnist.

Norwegians Not Truckling To Nazi Conquerors

Formerly Placid People Now Being Taught How To Hate; Robberies of Invaders Told

SOME of the hardships at present being experienced by Norwegians in Norway, in spite of alleged German efforts to make them part of the enlarged Reich "lebensraum", were outlined in a broadcast given in Shanghai on Wednesday, by Mr. K. A. Persen, prominent Norwegian resident. The broadcast was entitled "Uncensored news from Norway", and dealt with news which had been suppressed by the Nazi censors. It follows:—

A striking remark was made recently by a foreigner in Norway, a man who has known the Norwegian people for some time, enjoyed their hospitality and come to realize their amiable attitude towards all strangers within their borders. He said: "I did not believe it possible, but the Norwegians have begun to hate." And this is exactly what has gradually taken place in Norway since the Nazi invasion. You have no doubt read the report from Stockholm carried two days ago by the "United Press" telling about persistent rioting, sabotage and street demonstrations in Bergen. From information to hand I can tell you that it is not only in Bergen that the Nazis are getting tangible proofs of Norwegian hatred. The Nazis have at present at least 90,000 soldiers in Bergen and its vicinity. When it is realized that the population of Bergen is in the neighbourhood of 100,000 the feeling of the population towards this overwhelming display of force can easily be imagined. But the main cause behind the present disturbances is probably the fact that the Nazi carriers of culture are living on the country. The Norwegians are seeing their carefully stored stocks of food and other goods quickly disappearing and with a Nordic winter facing them they are under no illusions as to what to expect.

Difficult to Handle

The little bank clerk from the Rhineland, Terboven, is beginning to find his Viking subjects somewhat difficult to handle. Incidentally he has received an additional "distinction" in the shape of another nickname. By changing two letters in his name he has become 'Verboten', the meaning of which in German is "forbidden". I am sure he does not in the least relish this most appropriate title recently conferred upon him. 'Verboten' proclaimed not so long ago over the radio that the Nazis were not going to deprive the Norwegians of their food. His assurances, however, have been worth as little as the other "promises" emanating from the Third Reich, and he has fully confirmed the well-known fact that the Nazi organization has no dearth of expert liars.

This is an extract from a letter which would not have passed the censorship: "'Verboten' told us that they were not going to deprive us of our food. This is a sheer unmitigated lie. They are taking our potatoes, our corn, our vegetables, our canned goods, meat, coffee, chocolate, wool linen-cloth (to use for bandages etc. at the front) our butter, our eggs. They are taking everything—everything—everything, and God only knows when there is going to be a stop to it. They are obviously going to squeeze us to the last drop and it is certain that famine will await us if the war is not over soon. People are buying everything they can of food and clothing as long as their money has any value and we have of course done the same thing as far as possible. Mother and father have also taken similar steps, so we shall manage one winter at least, but two—that is out of the question. The newspapers are compelled to insert articles full of lies telling people that it is wrong and unnecessary to 'hamstring' and lay in stocks of goods, but as you may realize people do it in any case. We have ration-cards for flour, bread, butter, coffee and sugar and more cards will undoubtedly appear. There is very little of meat, and during the last 14 days we have not been able to obtain a single egg for love or money. Calamity has certainly descended upon us! If only we are not going to freeze during the winter! We have no coal and no coke and all central heating must be done with ordinary wood. I cannot tell you how I dread this coming winter! If only the children can manage to carry through. Those who live in old fashioned apartments are now far better off, since they have ordinary stoves.....And now I simply cannot endure writing more about the misery here. By the way, naturally we are not receiving the 'Readers Digest' any more."

Country Robbed

The following figures illustrate to what extent the Germans have robbed the country in every respect. During the first four and a half months the Nazis drew on the Bank of Norway a sum in the neighbourhood of £23,000,000 or, in accordance with the normal rate of exchange U.S. $115,000,000. This means that they have used about U.S. $9,000,000 per day as expenses in connection with the occupation. The first bill submitted to the Administration Council in Oslo in this connection amounted to £18,000,000 or U.S. $90,000,000 of which £10,000,000 were demanded immediately as the first instalment. While people are now groaning under this heavy extra taxation Quisling's paper, which ironically is named "Free People," states that these burdens are the results of an extravagant democratic government. This is really adding insult to injury. Taking into consideration the enormous destruction wrought in my country by our "protectors" based on reliable figures I have recently received it can now be stated that Hitler is responsible from a financial standpoint to the extent of at least 1,000,000,000 Kroner, or U.S. $228,000,000 as far as Norway is concerned. A fine gesture indeed on the part of a friendly neighbour!

Here are some news about the export of Norweyian goods to Germany. In the beginning of September about 16,000 bags of flour were taken away from the flour mills at Vaksdal near Bergen, and 5,000 bags from Bodö in northern Norway. Bodö, as you may recollect was razed to the ground by Nazi bombers.

Most of this flour went to Germany, but Norwegian flour is also put into German bags marked, for instance, "Westphalen," and distributed for the use of German troops ostensibly "imported" from Germany. "Officially" Goebbels is so kind and considerate, and so from time to time a small quantity of corn actually "arrives" in Norway, but this is only a fraction of what the Germans are confiscating. This move on the part of the Nazis is obviously meant as a demonstration of their "goodwill." The Germans are at present confiscating 60 per cent. of the Norwegian harvest. They have even measured the areas under cultivation. Every night extra trains are proceeding eastward from Bergen with supplies of fish, agricultural supplies and other products destined for Germany. Many of the food products of which before we had an abundance in Norway, for instance the famous Norwegian goat-cheese, one can now find exhibited in the shop windows in Germany. But goat-cheese has entirely disappeared from the markets in Norway. With regard to piece-goods Norwegian products are being sent to Germany which in turn ship to Norway a poor grade of ersatz goods for which the Norwegians must pay heavy prices.

Search for Clothing

One of the first things the Germans did after they had filled their stomachs with wholesome Norwegian food was to go shopping for clothing material. Even the young Nazi soldiers seemed to be aware of the excellent quality of British piece-goods. And under ordinary circumstances Manchester might have felt flattered had it known of the demand for its goods which prevailed in Norway since the Nazi invasion. In fact it is doubtful that any British material is now obtainable anywhere in Norway. In the beginning of July it was already impossible to buy a decent suit in Stavanger and blankets were unobtainable. As far as woollen underwear is concerned that had disappeared from the shops long before that time. The German uniform-cloth looks very smart, but it is known that in washing it has a tendency to shrink rather much, and how well it will protect the Nazi soldiers against a bitter Norwegian winter remains to be seen.

In a small town in Norway a local tailor telephoned a certain family one day and suggested that it might be advisable to lay in a stock of suit-lengths since several "strangers" had called at his shop recently and seemed bent on buying his entire stock. He added that as the material was disappearing he would not have any stock left during the coming winter. The day after when Mr. X called at the tailor's he found two German officers already in the shop. They both wanted suits and asked the tailor when he could finish the work. After some consideration the tailor replied very seriously that he thought it might be possible to have the orders ready in about two months. This did not suit the Nazis who then left the establishment. After their departure the tailor told his fellow townsman to call the next day for a trial. This indicates the sort of polite, but most effective passive resistance which the Germans have to put up with all the time in Norway.

And it is not only the economic resources of Norway which the Germans are capitalizing. Ever since the fighting ceased they have been sending large contingents of tubercular children from Germany to Norway. Most of the sanatoriums, especially in the eastern part of Norway in the vicinity of Lillehamar, are filled with German children. German troop transports are continually arriving in and leaving the country, mostly arriving; but these troop movements indicate that Hitler is not only using Norway as a possible jumping-off place for his attack intended against Great Britain, but also as a holiday resort for his tired and disillusioned soldiers. These visitations coupled with the constant influx of civilians are of course causing a rapid exhaustion of food supplies, since not only are the Germans filling themselves to capacity during their stay in Norway, but they are also carrying as much as possible with them back to Hitler's paradise! Already by the middle of August there were at least 400,000 Germans, civilians and soldiers in Norway.

Impossible Task

It is small wonder that we Norwegians resent the presence of Hitler's uninvited iron "heels." The following story is indicative of the ruling sentiment: During an official enquiry by the German police in a Nowegian town a man was requested to call and report if he heard any one express himself especially disparaging about the Third Reich or the German military forces. The man replied: "Sorry, as often as that it will be impossible for me to call."

A short extract from another letter will be of interest, amongst other things since it furnishes an additional proof of the lengthy preparations made by the German general staff before they commenced their invasion of Norway: "We have censorship on all sides, a letter from one part of the country to the other is opened. Telephone conversations are listened to. When speaking over the long distance telephone one is told what to say and the newspapers are all under control. This time, however, I have an opportunity to tell you what happened here because this letter at least will not be opened by the Germans.

"Von Falkenhorst, the Nazi Commander-in-Chief, stayed several months at the Grand Hotel in Oslo before the invasion. In the hotel register he appeared as an agent for a German manufacturing firm specialising in stockings and socks. He speaks Norwegian, and the servants at the hotel were very much surprised when they suddenly saw the agent in hosiery emerge in full general's uniform on April 9. We know now that in spite of the statement made by all Germans, or the big lies started by Goebbels & Company, that the real intention was to take all the food away from us. At present we have even cards for fats in a country where we have always had a surplus of fats. German 'planes were shot down over Swedish territory just after April 9 on their way to Germany—laden with butter. Corn is being sent south by rail in great quantities. We heard that from people connected with the railways."

The Norwegian free press, which has been the pride of Norway, is today in a desperate situation. It has been taken into use by the Germans as one of their most important means to subjugate the Norwegian people and it is compelled to maintain and assert views which are in the sharpest conflict with Norwegian sentiments. It has become known outside the boundaries of Norway that the members of the press themselves have done what they could to weaken the systematic destruction of the Norwegian press, so rich in traditions. Many of them have been imprisoned for the sake of their convictions. Others continue to use every little opportunity in carefully worded phrases, in citations from history and poetry or even "between the lines" to give expression for the Norwegian peoples' true reaction to those earth-shaking events which also to such a degree have brought calamity, disaster and ruin over Norway. Only a mere handful—if any—has found it possible to adjust themselves to this new one-sided milieu which is so foreign to the Norwegian feeling of liberty. Under the most difficult conditions possible the members of the Norwegian press continue their work in the hope that their contribution shall be understood by Norwegians without and within our occupied Fatherland. A document which affords sensational proofs of how the Germans terrorize the Press has eluded the censors. It is a circular sent out by the German controlled Telegraphic Bureau in Oslo, containing "directions" as to how Norwegian papers shall conduct themselves. Here are a few choice lines from this strange document:

"Official War communiqués from countries with which Germany is at war must not be published, unless they come from the Norwegian Telegraphic Bureau (N.T.B.)"

"News from broadcasts in countries with which Germany is at war must also not be published."

"The Government of Mr. Nygaardsvold must not be defended."

"Speeches by persons belonging to the Royal Family, the Government or the Norwegian General Staff must not be published. Photographs of these persons must also not be published."

"Countries with which Germany has treaties must not be attacked."

Financial Information

And here we have a paragraph which is clear proof of how the Nazis' struggle to make it appear that the country's industry, paralyzed by war, is, in spite of everything in a flourishing condition:

"Information which concerns economic and financial conditions, industry and commerce must not become the cause of unrest. Only that kind of information which maintains that the difficulties are being overcome or have been overcome can be sent out."

"Nothing must be published which acn damage the relation between the German troops and the Norwegian population."

And here is one that speaks volumes:

"The communiques of the German High Command must be given a good display, preferably on the first page."

Here is another interesting item:

"It is hereby prohibited to use the words 'World War' in connection with the present conflict."

As a fitting conclusion to all the instructions contained in this remarkable document, we find this passage:

"Generally attention must be directed to the fact that it is not only the task of the press to bring news but also to shape the opinion and lead the population."

These are some of the methods which Goebbels use to create similar obedient subjects in Norway as seven years continuous Nazi propaganda has given him in Nazi Germany.

I am going to give an example of how the Nazis work its drastic control and 'direction' of the Press: They are regularly sending out 'directives' concerning various events which they desire to treat in a definite manner. A bombardment in Bergen carried out by British 'planes and with the unfortunate result that some houses were destroyed by fire afterwards resulted in 'directive No. 22' Following is a complete version of this circular:

"The following information concerning the bombardment at Bergen must be published in all papers. The information must be illustrated by all the papers with the following headings of which one may choose freely."

1.—"The King sends us help from England. Bergen has been bombed."

2.—"Royal greetings from England. Bombs over Bergen."

3.—"Hearty thanks, Haakon, for the fact that Bergen burnt."

4.—"Did King Haakon know in London that his British friends bombed Bergen?"

5.—"No sooner is the King in London before Norwegian subjects are bombed to death."

6.—"King Haakon continues the war. Bergen has become his first victim."

As it happened all the big morning papers in Oslo chose to use "heading No. 4" as the one that was calculated to hurt the public least, since this particular heading could be construed in two ways. But even the fact that so many papers which otherwise seldom use the same titles over the same news this time chose exactly the same title was sufficient to make most people realize the meaning behind it all—merely another trick of Nazi propaganda. In order to avoid becoming completely ridiculous the Germans sent out a new "directive" to all Norwegian papers which went to press that afternoon which read: "A prohibition against using 'heading No. 4'". This order was as usually signed by the "Reich Commissariat. Department of the Press".

That there seems to be no limit to Goebbels' propaganda efforts the following fact also serves to illustrate: A Norwegian one day picked up a German newspaper in a hotel in the eastern part of Norway and much to his surprise he found this headline: "80,000 Germans killed due to a natural catastrophy in Norway."

Chinese Soldiers in Chekiang Mutiny

Adherents of Wang Regime Join Chungking; Battles With Japanese

Unwilling to fight their own countrymen, several units of the "Peace and National Reconstruction Army" in Pootung, said to be taking orders from the new Nanking régime and the Japanese, have mutinied, joined Chungking and are reported by the leading Chinese dailies in Shanghai to be engaged in guerilla attacks against the Japanese.

This interesting development occurred recently when the Japanese military tried to mobilize the Chinese army in Pootung to fight in Chekiang where the battle for Shaoshing, the famous wine district, has just resulted in a Chinese victory.

The Japanese succeeded in ordering part of the "peace" army to fight on the west Chekiang front, although it cannot be ascertained whether or not this new Chinese army has actually engaged in hostilities there. They were trying to mobilize the second batch of new Chinese soldiers when the "peace" army revolted, it is stated.

The new Chinese soldiers were sceptical about the Japanese move because, it is said, the Japanese formerly promised to allow the first batch of the "peace" army to return to Pootung from Chekiang in 10 days, but became suspicious when they have heard nothing from their comrades for many weeks.

Japanese Attacked

On October 25, five units of the Sixth Regiment of the "Peace" army in Pootung numbering about 600 strong revolted, established contacts with Chungking agents and began attacking the Japanese in guerilla warfare. These were the first units of new Chinese soldiers to revolt, it is said, indicating that there might be more mutinies.

A circular telegram sent out by the revolting soldiers is published by the "Shun Pao." It is explained in this telegram that they have tolerated humiliation in view of the difficult situation but that they have been waiting for a chance to offer their services to the country.

"Recently, with her feet more deeply placed in mud, Japan has found it difficult to distribute her troops to the front and begun mobilizing several thousand troops in Pootung for an attack in west Chekiang so that the Chinese may fight their own countrymen."

The telegram then goes on to explain that they are not willing to fight the Chinese and that realizing that they were about to become "perpetual sinners of the Chinese race" they finally decided to revolt. It is stated that Chungking has allowed them to repent.

Dispute Over Trumpet In H.M. Court

Circus Musicians Squabble About Stolen Instrument

A dispute about a trumpet in H.M. Supreme Court was adjourned until Monday by Mr. C. H. Haines, acting Assistant Judge, yesterday morning, after it was discovered that the writ issued by Mr. J. K. Sherman against Mr. Charles Antony was wrongly drawn up. The plaintiff claimed the return of a trumpet or damages amounting to the value of the instrument, which it was stated, had been loaned to the defendant, and subsequently stolen from him.

Mr. Sherman stated that on the opening night of the Olympic Circus, September 14, he lent defendant a trumpet for use in the band, on condition that he did not leave it in the circus at night. On September 21, witness said, Antony came to him and told him that the trumpet had been stolen. This evidence was corroborated by two other musicians, who appeared as witnesses for the plaintiff.

The defendant denied ever having received a trumpet from Sherman, stating, however, that Mr. Maltseff, who was later called to the box, had given him one. Mr. Maltseff revealed that the plaintiff had lent a trumpet to the defendant on the understanding that it was only to be used by the witness, who had lent his own instrument to Antony.

In adjourning the case, Mr. Haines stated that the writ was wrongly drawn up, since, in order to sustain an action of this nature, the plaintiff must have demanded the return of the instrument and the defendant refused to return it. Moreover, the plaintiff must prove that the instrument was still in the possession of the defendant at the time he took out the writ. According to the plaintiff's own evidence the trumpet was stolen on September 21, long before the writ was taken out, and also that he had never asked defendant for the return of the instrument.

Mysterious Shooting In Hongkew

Victim Reluctant to Talk; In Critical State

The Hongkew police yesterday were seeking to establish the reason behind the mysterious shooting of Wong Dah-bao, 34, unemployed who was shot on Chapoo Road near Woochang Road by an unknown gunman.

The victim was walking along the road when his assailant stealthily crept upon him from behind and fired two shots at him, both of which took effect. He collapsed while the gunman escaped among the crowd which gathered at the sound of the shooting.

The wounded man was rushed to the Shanghai Sanitarium and Clinic in an ambulance of the Fire Department and it was learned that his condition is critical, as a bullet which had lodged in his spine could not be extracted. He was reluctant to make any statement regarding the shooting.

The police who were informed by telephone made enquiries at the scene of the shooting, but could ascertain little. The crime is said to be devoid of political motive and the victim is believed to be the victim of gang warfare. His age was given as 34, and it was learned that he was shot in the back.

Memorial Service for Late Mayor Fu

Officials from Foreign Areas Attend

Many officials from foreign areas here and Chinese officials of the new regime attended an official memorial meeting held yesterday in the auditorium of the Shanghai Special Municipality Building in Kiangwan in honour of the late Mayor Fu Siao-en in the presence of many Japanese naval and army officers. The building was fittingly decorated with many white cloth scrolls bearing condolences sent by Chinese friends and colleagues of the late chief of the Chinese city regime.

It was learned that the family memorial service will be held in the late Mayor's home in Avenue Joffre on November 13 and 14. The body of the late Mayor, who was chopped to death by his own servant several weeks ago in his home in Hongkew, is now lying at rest in the Jessfield Funeral Parlours in Yu Yuen Road pending final internment arrangements. The late Mayor has been honoured by the new Nanking regime with a "public" funeral.

Morphine Trafficker Axed to Death

Revenge Believed Cause Of Gruesome Murder

A morphine salesman was hacked to death in the French Concession yesterday afternoon, being found by the police in a pool of blood on the road. After enquiries by the police it was discovered that the man's name was Li King-gneu, aged 25, and that he had served three jail sentences for trafficking in morphine.

It is believed that the murder was one of revenge, and is a settling of accounts between a gang of drug dealers who have quarrelled among themselves. The victim of the fend was killed in a lane off Rue Bourgeat, near Avenue Joffre, his femoral artery being severed by a hatchet blow. He bled copiously from this wound, and died shortly after the attack. The French Police were investigating the crime at a late hour last night.

Depression Drives Man to Suicide

Continuous depdression since 1933 when he lost a leg in the war, drove a Chinese to commit suicide at the Yung Tsen Hotel on Rue Hue where he had been staying since September 27.

His body was found early yesterday morning by a servant of the hotel who went to help the man with his toilet. In a letter left behind by deceased he stated that he came here with $300 to purchase an artificial leg.

HELP FOR GASTRITIS VICTIMS

The great problem in gastritis and other digestive disturbances is how to rest the sick stomach and still nourish the exhausted body.

Solid food is out of the question. Even many liquid foods irritate the stomach lining and cause pains and vomiting. There is a food, however, which actually soothes the inflamed stomach. It is Horlicks. Doctors recommend it in all cases of severe digestive trouble because it is so easily assimilated and so highly nutritious.

Horlicks is a complete food in itself. It soon rebuilds the wasted tissues, restores the lost appetite, pours strength and vitality into the impoverished bloodstream. Your usual store sells Horlicks. Get a supply to-day.

From NAGASAKI: Kobe Maru, due this morning, Yangtsepoo Wharf.

Due at Future Dates

All vessels are listed under their terminal port. The first date is that of the ship's departure from that port, and the second is the date she is due to arrive in Shanghai. Where a ship's name is duplicated it indicates the port of call last visited.

On account of the present international situation there is considerable interference with movements of ships, especially those from Europe. In cases where it is definitely known that the vessel is not running to schedule the Shanghai arrival date is omitted.

Yesterday's Business

There seemed to be a definitely more optimistic note in the market yesterday, with Wheelocks as usual leading the way. This issue, which closed previously at $88 sellers, was immediately bid up to $90, subsequently rising to $92, but most business during the day was done at $91. As a result of this strength, the Trust Companies showed an improvement, while the whole industrial list showed renewed signs of life. Rubber shares, the Dutch issues in particular, were very firm on the expectation of good interim dividends. It was the general opinion that the market was slightly overbought, but it was felt that there might be bargains offered tomorrow by tired longs.

Dow-Jones Summary

By courtesy of Swan, Culbertson & Fritz

Stock prices continued to advance under the leadership of steels and other heavy industrial groups, inspired by excellent earnings reports and indications of gaining strength of Mr. Wendell Willkie. Douglas Aircraft responded to the dividend of $5.00 per share and estimated earnings for nine months at $12.15 per share. United States Steel ingot production is now ruling at 99 per cent. of capacity.

Stocks:—We believe that the market would be more aggressive, reflecting the excellent domestic business and political developments, if the European situation were less uncertain. The Department of Commerce reported that new orders placed with manufacturers during the month of September reached the peak for 1940.

Cotton:—Quiet conditions prevailed. The commercial freight allotment to England has been reduced to 7,500 bales monthly.

Wheat:—Ruled barely steady on professional selling and profit-taking on slight upturns. However, there were resting buying orders but these were not aggressive. Favourable rains in the Winter wheat belt contributed to the easiness.

Corn:—Increasing primary receipts are becoming a marnet factor, but the "cash" position continues to command a premium.

Rubber:—The market was very quiet.

Hides:—Were easier on profit-taking and the failure of the market to follow the trend of stocks. Tanner demand was less aggressive, whilst packers were offering at last prices.

Sugar 4:—The market was again a stagnant affair.

Chemor United R. Co. Interim Dividend

New York Stocks

Wednesday's Closing Quotations

New York, Oct. 30.

The Stock Exchange presented a very steady appearance today, with quotations generally finishing from fractions to about one point up. Trading was slightly more active, with the market tracing the same pattern as witnessed yesterday. Steels and other heavy industrials led the upward movement, which was spread over a wide list, influenced by continued good domestic business news and earnings reports, while the foreign political situation remained unchanged. The turnover amounted to 670,000 shares.—Reuter.

Dow-Jones Summary

By courtesy of Swan, Culbertson & Fritz

Stock prices continued to advance under the leadership of steels and other heavy industrial groups, inspired by excellent earnings reports and indications of gaining strength of Mr. Wendell Willkie. Douglas Aircraft responded to the dividend of $5.00 per share and estimated earnings for nine months at $12.15 per share. United States Steel ingot production is now ruling at 99 per cent. of capacity.

Stocks:—We believe that the market would be more aggressive, reflecting the excellent domestic business and political developments, if the European situation were less uncertain. The Department of Commerce reported that new orders placed with manufacturers during the month of September reached the peak for 1940.

Cotton:—Quiet conditions prevailed. The commercial freight allotment to England has been reduced to 7,500 bales monthly.

Wheat:—Ruled barely steady on professional selling and profit-taking on slight upturns. However, there were resting buying orders but these were not aggressive. Favourable rains in the Winter wheat belt contributed to the easiness.

Corn:—Increasing primary receipts are becoming a marnet factor, but the "cash" position continues to command a premium.

Rubber:—The market was very quiet.

Hides:—Were easier on profit-taking and the failure of the market to follow the trend of stocks. Tanner demand was less aggressive, whilst packers were offering at last prices.

Sugar 4:—The market was again a stagnant affair.

Export-Import Bank Grants Loan to Brazil

Washington, Oct. 31.

The United States Export-Import Bank yesterday granted the Bank of Brazil a $25,000,000 credit, it was announced.

Observers pointed out that the credit was granted soon after a mission of Latin-American officials, including representative from Brazil, visited the United States.—United Press.

Fire Investigated By War Office

No Evidence of Sabotage; Carelessness Believed to Have Caused Blaze

Washington, Oct. 31.

The War Department yesterday appointed a five-man board to investigate a pre-dawn fire which almost burned U.S. military secrets and vital codes.

The fire destroyed three wings of the munitions building and an undetermined number of important documents and files. For a time it threatened to envelope the entire building and consume the valuable military codes.

Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, said he had been informed by Col. Henry L. Stimson, the Secretary of War, that evidence indicated there was no sabotage involved in the origin of the blaze. It was believed the fire originated from a carelessly thrown cigarette or a short circuit.

Investigation showed fire damage to the war department office building was confined mainly to the third floor and the uncompleted fourth floor of wing No. 3. The top floors or Wings No. 2 and No. 4 also were damaged by fire.

The lower floors of the structure were damaged by water.

Col. Stimson's office is in a wing far removed from the blaze.—United Press.

Moscow Comment on Greece Invasion

Long-Drawn-Out Fighting Seen by "Red Star"

Moscow, Oct. 31.

The Soviet Army's newspaper, the "Red Star", commented today on military aspects of the Italian-Greek war, expressing the opinion that the hostilities might be long-drawn-out.

"The location of Greece in the eastern Mediterranean, where the British fleet is dominant, ensures the aid of the latter for Greece since Britain must be interested in preserving such a convenient war base," the newspaper said.

"Apparently," the article continued, "Britain will send aid via Piraeus, Volos and Salonika, necessitating the neutralization of Italian bases in the Dodecanese. Albania's limited possibilities from the standpoint of bases for military action will prevent the despatch of overwhelming Italian forces.....With the appearance of British aircraft in Greece, air bases in south-eastern Italy are threatened.

"Under these conditions," the article concluded, "the hostilities on the Albanian-Greek front promise no speedy decision."

Newspapers here continued today to devote considerable space to the war, much more than to British-German hostilities, but official Soviet reaction to the situation in the Balkans remained unavoidable.—United Press.

No Comment on China, U.S. Pact Report

No Proposal by Mr. Soong Reported in Washington

Washington, Oct. 31.

State department officials declined yesterday to comment on a Singapore despatch from Mr. Hallett Abend, "New York Times" Correspondent in Shanghai, claiming that Mr. T. V. Soong, Chairman of the Board of the bank of China was seeking a formal Sino-American alliance.

State Department circles indicated that so far as they were aware, Mr. Soong, now in the United States, had not presented such a proposal. Mr. Soong was currently reported to be planning to remain in Washington several more months. He had not held any recent talks with President Roosevelt or Mr. Sumner Welles in which the subject of an alliance might be broached, informed circles declared.

Observers interested in the Far East opined that the suggestion might be a balloon calculated to sound out Washington's reaction and was not anticipated to gain any sort of favourable reaction.

The circles pointed out that any alliance along these lines would mean the entry of America into both the European and Asiatic wars.—Domei.

Turn in Japan's Policy Foreseen

Significance Seen By "Kokumin" in Meetings At Tokyo

Tokyo, Oct. 31.

The "Kokumin Shimbun," commenting today on the meeting yesterday between Premier Prince Konoye and Japan's envoy to Nanking, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, and on a meeting the Premier is to have soon with the Minister of Commerce, Mr. Ichizo Kobayashi, said "these two interviews are regarded as likely to inaugurate a new turn in the Government's efforts to settle the China affair and establish a sphere of common prosperity in Greater East Asia.

The paper said that Japan's consistent anti-Chungking policy and the enforcement of the Abe-Wang Ching-wei agreement are expected to deal "a fatal blow" to General Chiang Kai-shek's military power.

"Inasmuch as Britain's and the United States' interference with our manoeuvres regarding the Netherlands East Indies is growing intolerable," the "Kokumin" said, "the Japanese Government is undertaking the long-awaited execution of the "Imperial Way" diplomatic policy, in accordance with the spirit of the Japanese nation and the new international situation arising from the tri-partite alliance."

The newspaper refrained from explaining specifically what this policy implied.—United Press.

Canada Has Three-Year Wheat Supply

London, Oct. 31.

Canada has sufficient wheat to supply Britain's needs for three years, according to an announcement by the Canadian Minister of Agriculture.—Reuter.

THE Fukien Provincial Government has made a grant of C$1,260,000 to commence winter sowing in a total of 66 northern districts, reports the "Sin Wan Pao." Of this amount C$200,000 will be set aside for the purchase of seeds. The plan is expected to yield 7,000,000 piculs of rice in the coming harvest.

Air Training Scheme Ahead of Schedule

Canada and Australia Do More Than Expected

London, Oct. 31.

The empire air training scheme designed to produce 20,000 pilots and 30,000 air crews annually is in full operation and is already months ahead of schedule, declared Lord Cranborne, Secretary of State for Dominions, in a speech yesterday.

Canada and Australia, he said, each had 300 machines in operation while Canadian destroyers were operating with the British Navy and the Australian Navy in the Mediterranean.

"In the Middle East forces from southern Rhodesia and other parts of Africa stand alongside our own troops to defeat the Italian forces," he said. "Others are massing while thousands of Canadians and British are eager to deal faithfully with Hitler's invasion.

"Never has the British Commonwealth been more important than today. In the storm now shaking the foundations of the world the British Empire stands like a rock against which winds and waves break without weakening its strength."—Reuter.
